Allies Admit Maginot Line Is Being Cut Off; Berlin Expects French to Sue for Peace Soon; Britain Vows to Fight On If France Is Broken

Reassurances By Hitler Rouse 'Recollections' In Roosevelt

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

America replied yesterday to Hitler's purported assurances to the Western Hemisphere with a recollection by the President of broken Nazi pledges and full speed ahead on all defense fronts.

The House sped the RFC defense loan bill to the Senate and the $1,822,522,958 Regular Army bill became law. The War Department revealed plans for training 10,000 pilots, bombardiers and navigators to man its air fleets.

Assuring Premier Reynaud of France through the press that everything is being done by this country that can be done under the circumstances, the President turned a fishy eye on Hitler's disclaimer of designs in this hemisphere.

Record of a Poor Risk

"That brings up recollections," said the President when questioned on Hitler's reported statement. He permitted direct quotation of this phrase, but said it could be expanded upon indefinitely with specific dates and notices.

Mr. Roosevelt implied that Germany's record of violating pledges of non-intervention in other nations does not justify confidence in such assurances given the New World.

In an interview with an American correspondent, Hitler was reported to have termed any idea of Western Hemisphere invasion as grotesque.

Other developments as defense plans moved apace:

Old Destroyers Called up

A new destroyer unit in the Atlantic squadron was created by the Navy, with Rear Admiral Ferdinand K. Reichmuth in command of some 100 ships both new and of World War vintage. Earlier, the Navy moved to return to active service 71 World War destroyers and submarines now in reserve.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, prepared a resolution he said was broad enough to empower President Roosevelt to order any automobile manufacturer to turn to aircraft production.

The House approved viva voce a bill authorizing the RFC to set up corporations to finance defense plant expansion and acquisition of strategic materials of war.

President Roosevelt signed the Army Appropriation Bill with its regular and emergency funds for raising the Army to 280,000 enlisted men and for purchase of 2,566 planes, tanks and other mechanized equipment.

The Senate Appropriations Committee prepared to rush the House-approved $1,706,000,000 Army and Navy defense bill to the Senate floor.

Mr. Roosevelt announced creation of a new "National Defense Research Committee" of eight distinguished scientists headed by Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institution and of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

D.C. Policeman Shot to Death By Truckman

IVAN W. THOMPSON

Own Gun Is Emptied Into Patrolman's Prostrate Body

Park Policeman Ivan W. Thompson was shot to death at 5 p. m. yesterday in the aftermath of a minor traffic incident, the third Washington policeman to die of gunshot wounds within 48 hours.

Bound for his home at 2240 Evarts street northeast, after working in the detail guarding President Roosevelt on his afternoon visit to the 4-H Club camp in the Monument Grounds, Thompson was killed by a colored truck driver in a scuffle that climaxed an auto chase ending at First and I streets northeast. Although off duty the policeman was still in uniform.

The policeman had forced the truck to the curb, after a short pursuit resulting from a minor traffic infraction. When he ordered the driver out, a fight began.

The furious battle, witnessed by scores of passersby and autoists, ended when the driver grabbed Thompson's .38 caliber service revolver and emptied the cylinder into his prostrate form. Witnesses said the driver fired five times. A first shot was fired by the policeman, they said.

Thompson, 42, who leaves a wife and four children aged from 11 to 18, was pronounced dead at Sibley Hospital.

Police are holding Clarence Brocker, a 24-year-old, squat but powerfully built man weighing about 200 pounds, whom they say was the driver of the truck. Brocker's address is 15 I street northeast.

Police last night reported Brocker was operating the truck without a driver's permit.

Relating his story of the encounter to Metropolitan Police last night Brocker quoted the Park policeman as saying:

"I'm off duty but I am going to lock you up anyway."

Fortress Chain's Supply Line Has Been Severed, Germans Assert

By Richard C. Hottelet,

Berlin, June 14.—France will be beaten to her knees within 10 days and forced to sign a separate peace, Nazi leaders boasted today as the green-gray tide of Adolf Hitler's blitzkrieg swept along the boulevards of Paris and smashed the "cornerstone" of the Maginot Line at Montmedy.

German troops, dusty and worn but jubilant in their victory, marched into Paris without firing a shot and swung down the broad and beautiful Champs Elysees past the Arc de Triomphe while the Nazi war machine unleashed a blasting frontal attack on the Maginot Line.

[The triumphant entry of Adolf Hitler into Paris on June 21, the twenty-first anniversary of the date on which Germany agreed to sign the hated Versailles treaty, was envisioned today by ardent Nazis, the Associated Press said. The treaty was signed on the twenty-eighth.]

[The French reported the Maginot Line attack was repulsed with tremendous Nazi losses.]

The flanking wedge driven behind the Maginot Line was reported in today's communique to have reached as far south as Vitry le Francois, 65 miles southwest of Montmedy and 45 miles southeast of Rheims.

Vitry le Francois is a vital railroad and highway junction below Charlons-sur-Marne—even farther south than Paris from the northern frontier of France—and the Germans claimed that they had severed communications serving the important French military bases of Verdun, Metz, Toul and Nancy behind the Maginot Line.

Say They Can't Hold Out

With these communications cut, it was said, the French cannot hope to hold out for long even in their supposedly impregnable underground forts stretching for 125 miles from Montmedy to the Swiss border.

The great French seaport of Le Havre west of Paris fell to the Germans as the mighty German offensive reached its peak and blazed toward Hitler's threatened "final destruction" of the Allied armies in France.

The Germans smashed at the Maginot Line in the Saar region, crushed its western anchor at Mont-

One Prostrated In 88-Degree Heat

Although yesterday's highest temperature failed to set a new record it caused at least one heat prostration as the Weather Bureau's thermometer rose to 88 degrees at 2:10 p. m.

While waiting for a bus at Eighth and K streets southeast, Mrs. Mary E. Nothey, 38, of 717 F street southwest, fainted and was taken to Casualty Hospital for treatment.

English Decide To Spend Huge Sum Here Now For 'All Out' War

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), June 15. This "blackest week in history" for Britain and France drew from official circles today the dogged assertion that "whatever happens Britain will fight on" against Nazi Germany, while press and radio turned eager, speculative eyes on "the prospects of American intervention."

[A message that the British had abruptly ended the embarkation of troops for France came from London through the United Press about 10:30 last night. Shortly after midnight this report was qualified as an unofficial report and, at 12:30 this morning the entire message was withdrawn with the explanation that it was attributable to a misunderstanding.]

Contronted with the fall of Paris hard in the wake of Italy's entry into the war as a foe of the Allies, the British flung open their war chest to make immediate purchases of everything needed to prosecute the conflict.

The "intervention" and "blackest week" quotations both came from an official British radio commentator, who said the prospect of the former more than counterbalanced the latter.

Call for a Declaration

The London News Chronicle asserted:

"A declaration of war by America now would inject an impulse of bounding hope into every Frenchman's heart.

"The effect on the Nazis would be correspondingly depressing.

"Now, in this momentous crisis, America may have it in her power to tide civilization over its darkest hour by a strong dramatic act."

The newspaper's commentator, Vernon Bartlett, said he believed 150 German divisions (about 2,250,000 men) had been identified in the present battle of France and that "many more" remained in reserve.

"Faced with such odds," he declared, "it is doubtful whether anything short of a declaration of war by the United States could effectively alter the situation."

The Daily Mail and the Laborite Herald railed at Britain's previous "complacency" and "fantastic unpreparedness," but both counseled postponement of the "inquest" until later.

British official circles sought to put the best face possible on the fall of Paris, predicting that France would continue the struggle and noting that the French withdrawal "was a military, not a political decision."

Regardless of the outcome, these quarters added, Britain is in the war to a finish.

$7,000,000,000 Available

The British dicision to open full wide the war chest treasured against the now abandoned conception of a "long war" will be followed by orders for the immediate wholesale purchase of every tool of battle available in America.

In the momentous decision that the tide must be turned in France within weeks at most, the British made clear they were going "all

Envoy Protests Anti-Italian 'Drive' in U. S.

Colonna Tells Hull 'Campaign' Arouses Antipathy to His People

Ascanio Colonna, the Italian Ambassador, protested to Secretary Hull yesterday against an alleged campaign to arouse anti-Italian feeling in the United States.

Secretary Hull made no immediate comment on the protest, which was understood to have been an informal one, based chiefly on published reports from New York concerning alleged Fascist activities by Italian consular officials.

Colonna was reported to have denied vigorously that Italian officials were engaged in any political or other activities for promotion of Fascism here.

The main subject of the protest, however, was said to have been the report that New York police had been directed to investigate alleged Fascist activities of Italian consular officials.

Later the Italian Embassy issued a statement bearing upon the conduct of the consuls.

"The Italian consuls," the statement declared, "have always strictly limited their activities to their legal consular functions, and the Italian nationals in the United States have always kept irreproachable conduct, keeping themselves apart not only from the so-called 'un-American activities' but from any political activity whatsoever."

Whether President Roosevelt's recent speech at Charlottesville, Va., in which he termed Italy's entry into the war a stab in the back at France figured in the protest was not disclosed.

The War Today . . .

WITH THE GERMAN army in Paris for the first time in 69 years and French government officials in Bordeaux, whence they had fled from Tours, new reports of Nazi moves to win a separate peace from France stirred Europe.

BERLIN CLAIMED the French withdrawal to far south of Paris was a "full retreat" and would be followed, within ten days, by French acceptance of a forced peace. British officials' answer was that, no matter what France decides, Britain will fight on.

GERMANY'S MIGHTY forces, meanwhile, launched a head-on attack against the Maginot Line in the Saar region.

FRANCE ADMITTED the Nazi thrusts threatened the fortifications from the rear, that the famed line was being turned and that Montmedy, its northwest anchor, had fallen.

English Spending Sends Stocks Up

New York, June 14 (AP).—Securities and commodities advanced sharply in Wall and LaSalle streets today, in the face of the fall of Paris. Wall streeters said the rapidly developing American armament program, together with the news of England's plans to spend vast sums at once for American war materials caused the upturn.

British Blast Italian Base, Ignite Cruiser

Two Submarines Also Set on Fire, R. A. F. Announces

By the United Press

Cairo, June 14.—British warships and Royal Air Force planes attacked the Italian naval base of Tobouk on Tuesday and set fire to a 9,000-ton Italian cruiser and two submarines while fighting off heavy fire from Italian shore batteries, the British naval spokesman here revealed tonight.

The Italian cruiser was identified as the San Giorgio, rebuilt three years ago as a coast defense vessel mounting four 10-inch guns and eight 7.5-inch guns. Normal complement was 726 officers and men.

The submarines were not named.

The spokesman said no Allied ship was hit during the attack.

Air Raids Repelled

The middle east command of the R. A. F. said that three Italian air raids on the Red Sea base of Aden were driven off yesterday by British fighter planes and that the R. A. F. was continuing to attack Italian bases in East Africa.

One Italian tri-motored bomber was shot down and fell into the sea in flames, in the attack on Aden, a communique said, and two prisoners were taken. Another Italian plane was believed so badly dam-

Weary Poilus Retreat Fighting; Italian Coast Shelled by Navy

By the Associated Press

Tours, France, June 14.—The main armies of France fell back tonight far below abandoned, German-invaded Paris in a fighting retreat that may be their last movement of the war.

Other forces far to the east were declared to have thrown back, with "tremendous losses," a German head-on attack against the Maginot Line.

It had been acknowledged earlier, however, that Nazi thrusts between Paris and the Maginot Line were threatening it from the rear and that the line was being turned from Montmedy, its northwestern anchor.

All but broken under the mightiest assault ever thrown against men, the Poilus who fought the main battle of France counterattacked with a desperate fury as they retired under the Nazi pressure.

They did not even know whether their command could continue the struggle.

Tours, the new emergency seat of the ministers, from which Premier Reynaud sent a "last appeal" to President Roosevelt last night for American aid, was being abandoned for yet another refuge—presumably the southern Atlantic seaport of Bordeaux.

Italian Coast Shelled

Tonight's communique said the withdrawal below Paris had been "carried out conforming to plans," but was barren of details beyond disclosing the first French naval action against Italy in this war.

This was the bombardment last night by French warships of industrial establishments and the railway line along the Italian coast—an operation accompanied by an air raid in the region of Venice and the dropping of pamphlets on Rome.

But word from the fronts was little and bare of comfort for the French, aside from the French success reported at the Maginot Line, west of the Saar.

German advances carried on the east as far as Romilly, 65 miles southeast of Paris, and to St. Dizier, nearly 150 miles east of Paris.

The German west flank also advanced. (Five words were censored in the reference to this movement. Censorship from Tours generally was heavy.)

For half an hour antiaircraft guns thundered tonight in Tours itself. Refugees reaching here declared they had been bombed and machine-gunned west of Paris yesterday, and that many had been killed or wounded.

If the war goes on, the Loire River line through Tours and Orleans is the next strong natural barrier for a new defense.

Gate to Center of France

[The valley is the gateway to the center of France. Orleans, the nearest point to Paris, is 70 miles south of the capital.]

The German charge into the very mouths of the mighty guns in the Maginot Line was said by the French command to have been spearheaded with tanks and airplanes, all of which were declared beaten back.

[From Bern, Switzerland, it was reported that what German-Italian sources called a "death blow" appeared to threaten France through a German offensive on the upper

The Capital Doffs Its Hat

War-Conscious Washington Salutes Flag Still at Peace

Its ears ringing with the sound of war, every nerve strained to prepare against the coming of war, the Nation's Capital paused yesterday to pledge once more allegiance to the Nation's Flag, itself forged in the furnace of war.

In a score of gatherings, large and small, Washington heard members of Congress, Government officials, veterans of the last Great War, demand an invulnerable defense and warn against insidious attack from within. So the city celebrated Flag Day, conceived 25 years ago while that other war reddened the fields of France.

A day of rededication to the principles of American democracy was climaxed by a great mass meeting on the east plaza of the Capitol last night. Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, demanded immediate declaration of war on unassimilated aliens. He applauded the action of the House in voting 330 to 42 for deportation of Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader.

"For 19 years," he said, "Bridges, while enjoying the privileges of American citizenship, has refused to become naturalized. All that time he was engaged in hell-raising activities which branded him as anything but a good American. No wonder the patience of the people finally was exhausted . . .

"We must be constantly on guard against alien Communist activities; we must be watchful of Fascist and Nazi alien influences . . . We don't want the dictator kind of government here and we are not going to allow it to get a foothold. The American people stand overwhelmingly for a program that will combat the tyranny of communism and

Use Brakes More, Horns Less, Police Inspector Advises

A ban on automobile horns was advocated yesterday by Inspector Arthur E. Miller, the Metropolitan Police Department's new accident prevention chief.

"The horn in a city is a menace, and on the open road it's worse. Except in cases of extreme emergency, the horn has no purpose, and if motorists didn't have horns, they would have to use their brakes," Miller declared.

The inspector said he hasn't sounded the horn on his own car in more than a year.

"I recently drove from Chicago without touching the horn button once," he added. "An'd I didn't even have a close scrape."

Germany Denies Knowing Bullitt Has Been Seized

Berlin, June 14 (U.P.).—The German foreign office and high command, asked today about reports that United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt had been placed under protective arrest in Paris, said they knew nothing about it.

Negotiations for the surrender of Paris were conducted directly between the Germans and French without any neutral mediation, a German spokesman said.

[At his press conference at the White House yesterday, President Roosevelt, when informed of the reports that Bullitt was in "protective custody," posed this question:

["Could the ambassador be protected against what and whom?"

[It was the President's only comment.]

'Germany Will Not Forget'

Police Guarding Nazi Consul After Report of Threat to U. S.

By the United Press

New Orleans, June 14.—The German consulate here was placed under 24-hour police protection tonight at the request of the Consul General, Baron Edgar von Spiegel.

Von Spiegel, once an officer in the German navy and a World War U-boat commander, requested that the consulate be guarded a few hours after an afternoon New Orleans newspaper carried a story quoting him as having warned that the United States must be careful in aiding the Allies.

The story—which the baron subsequently denied—quoted him as saying that "Germany will not forget that when she was waging a struggle for her very life that the United States did everything in its power to aid her enemies."

[In Washington, Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said that if von Spiegel was correctly quoted "he is insulting" and should not be permitted to remain here.—Editor's note.]

Shortly after the paper appeared on the streets, it was understood the consulate began receiving threatening, anonymous telephone calls.

As soon as the Baron requested protection, the police department sped a squad car to the consulate

It was the first protest against the Nazi government's consular office here since the present war began. Nearly a year ago, Dr. John Harvey Sherman, president of the University of Tampa, Fla., testified in Washington before the Dies Committee that Von Spiegel had sought to influence the school's faculty by donation of German books.

Von Spiegel explained the books were intended only as prizes for German scholars, that many universities and colleges in his eight-state jurisdiction had accepted the books with thanks.

Over Our Shoulder

a pre-view of the Sunday Post

THURSDAY marked the seventh anniversary of The Washington Post under its present management and tomorrow is a similar birthday for the new Sunday Post. You'd hardly recognize the Sunday Post as it was seven years ago. It was a much smaller paper. The use of pictures was much more restricted. No Wirephoto. Two wire services instead of five. Color was not even considered except for the comic section. And most of the features which make the Sunday Post so interesting now were not in the paper of 1933.

Here is a partial list of the columns, features and entire sections you'll find in tomorrow's Sunday Post which were not there seven years ago:

Politics

The Republican convention, like a certain famous brand of recovery, is just around the corner. Does the G. O. And—more important politically—what's the line-up of States right now, the State-by-State division between those currently favoring a Republican President and those who want a Democrat? Sunday's Gallup Poll gives you the answer to that, too.

Senate Votes $100,000,000 More for Crop Disposal Fund

$285,000,000 Is Now Provided to Help Distribute Surpluses

By John B. Oakes

With hope fading for adjournment a week from today, the Senate plodded slowly ahead on the billion-dollar relief bill yesterday by voting an extra $100,000,000 for the disposal of surplus farm commodities.

This sum, approved by vote of 58 to 16, brings to $285,000,000 the amount of Federal funds available next year for meeting the surplus crop problem, mainly through the food stamp plan.

Eight Republicans, including Minority Leader McNary, joined Democrats led by Majority Leader Barkley in voting for the appropriation, which was sponsored by Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi. One of the few Senators voting against the Bilbo amendment, observed later that "you can't lick a farm bill in the Senate."

Supported by LaFollette

On the other hand, Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, urged his colleagues to vote for the proposal on the grounds that they should "not neglect the home front."

Earlier, the Senate defeated by 51 to 25 a move by Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, to raise the $975,650,000 provided in the bill for WPA to $1,488,000,000. If expended in the first eight months of the fiscal year, the Murray amendment would have given work to some 3,000,000 WPA employes, compared to about 2,000,000 under the present bill.

Meanwhile, Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee drove ahead with his plans for reporting out the national defense tax bill today and bringing it on to the floor Monday—just as if adjournment next Saturday were probable.

Few amendments are expected to be added to the House-approved revenue measure, aside from the proposal of Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, for a 10 per cent cut in Federal non-defense expenditures. General revision of the tax structure and many specific alterations in the pending bill have been suggested, however.

Wage Tax Overhauling

At the Finance Committee's final hearings on the bill yesterday, Ellsworth C. Alvord of the United States Chamber of Commerce and M. L. Seidman of the New York Board of Trade both urged that the tax system be overhauled. Seidman termed the bill "a temporary stop-gap" while Alvord suggested that the taxes in the pending bill be held to one year in order that complete revision might be effected next year.

Approving an increase in the National debt limit "for National defense purposes," Alvord at the same time urged "a definite requirement for reduction of non-defense expenditures."

C. C. Pettijohn, counsel for the motion pictures Producers and Distributors Association, suggested new theater admission taxes that would raise the yield from this source from the estimated $25,000,000 of the present bill to $60,000,000. Instead of imposing a 10 per cent tax on admissions above 30 cents, as approved by the House, Pettijohn proposed a sliding scale levying a 1-cent tax on admissions between 10 and 25 cents, and 2 cents between 26 and 49, and 10 per cent from 50 cents up. The present law starts the 10 per cent tax at 41 cents.

The Senate impelled by the adjournment rush, will meet today; the House yesterday quit for the weekend.

House Group Slashes Funds For Adm. Byrd

By the Associated Press

A House appropriations subcommittee has taken steps, members said yesterday, to put an end to the Byrd Antarctic Expedition and any plans for a permanent United States settlement in the South Polar regions.

It was learned that the subcommittee has refused to vote the expedition funds for another year's stay and wants to give it only enough money to come home. It has approved $117,000 instead of the $250,000 recommended by President Roosevelt and voted by the Senate.

The expedition has been under fire for some months, chiefly from Representative Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma, who told the House that Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd stood to make a personal fortune out of radio and other contracts resulting from the venture.

After a recent visit from Byrd, head of the expedition who returned to this country a few weeks ago to look after its affairs, Johnson said he found Byrd "a sincere and honorable gentleman from every possible standpoint."

On that occasion, Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, read to the House a letter from Secretary Hull declaring that the criticism of Byrd had been based "entirely on misapprehension as to the facts."

Hull described the expedition as essential to the task of getting a clearer title to the Antarctic regions claimed by the 21 American Republics. He said that such title was "vitally important" from considerations of continental defense.

The expedition already has accomplished much, Hull added, including the establishment of two well-equipped bases 1,200 miles apart, discovery of 14 new islands and six new mountain ranges, the reaching of 800 miles of the 1,200 miles of hitherto inaccessible coast line, and the investigation of 150,000 square miles of unknown territory.

D. C. Artillery Unit Near Top Strength

The 260th Coast Artillery, of the District National Guard, which provides the Capital with anti-aircraft defenses, has been brought close to its war strength of about 2,000 by recent enlistments, officers reported yesterday.

The regiment has been provided with modern armament and new radio equipment, besides telephone apparatus and 200 miles of wire for emergency communication purposes.

Landon Calls Roosevelt Cruel To Raise False Allied Hopes

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Kansan Accuses President of 'Disposition To Take Country to the Verge of War Without Regard to National Opinion

Topeka, Kans., June 14 (AP).—Alf M. Landon charged tonight that President Roosevelt had shown "a disposition to take this country to the verge of war without regard to national opinion" and added it was "cruel" to arouse "false hopes in the nations that are fighting for their existence."

Landon expressed his criticisms in a statement issued just before his departure for Philadelphia and the G. O. P. national convention.

Pointing to Senator Wheeler's recent threat to break with the Democratic Party if it became a "war party," Landon asserted:

"What has disturbed Senator Wheeler and what has profoundly disturbed me, has been the attitude of the President as disclosed most clearly in his Charlottesville speech . . ."

"Way of Dictatorships"

"The President offered to the Allies 'the material resources of the Nation.' He made this offer as if the material resources of the Nation were his to dispose of.

"This is not the way of democracy. It is the way of dictatorships—the way just taken by Mussolini.

"The speech was interpreted by the British press as . . . meaning that America is about to enter the war.

"The President may not have meant to give this impression. Indeed, he could not have meant to give it. He knows . . . that only Congress has the authority to declare war and that Congress has not the slightest notion of declaring war."

Springfield, Ill., June 14.—The Illinois Republican Convention sidetracked an effort to pledge the State's 58 delegates to Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, and adopted a platform declaring:

"The Republican Party for Americanism and peace. The Democratic Party stands for internationalism and war."

Backers of other Presidential candidates blocked an indorsement of Dewey, but the convention voted "appreciation and commendation" for the New York prosecutor's efforts toward "a revival of interest in the American system of government."

Leonard C. Reid, of Chicago, Dewey's Illinois manager, termed the resolution of commendation "entirely satisfactory." Dewey was unopposed in the Illinois Presidential preferential primary, which did not bind the 50 district delegates.

Willkie Assails New Deal

Boston, June 14.—Asserting that the Government cannot conceal its lack of preparedness "by talking of military equipment on order," Wendell Willkie said tonight the New Deal belonged to the era of the Blum government of France and the Chamberlain government of Britain and must be replaced.

Standing as a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, he assailed the Administration for what he called the "incompetent" handling of military expenditures, but added, "Let no one—especially no dictator abroad—be misled into thinking that we are not able to rouse from this lethargy and become strong."

"We must put into office . . . a Government that will waken and liberate the chained and sleeping giant of America," declared Willkie, in an address prepared for a mass meeting sponsored by three State-wide Republican organizations.

Noting that President Roosevelt took office at approximately the same time that Hitler came to power, he asserted the New Deal had encouraged dissention and strife, and attempted to justify itself with "trick words, purple passages and fine invective."

"Is it any wonder," he asked, "that Hitler scoffs at us? With a fraction of our manpower, and an infinitesimal fraction of our resources, he has terrorized the world. We, the strongest people on earth, have shown ourselves incapable of operating, let alone of defending, our own democracy."

50,000 Plane Program Called 'Romantic' by Army Expert

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 14.—Col. Francis H. Miles, jr., commandant of the United States Army Industrial College, termed an administration plan to build 50,000 airplanes "romantic stuff" today and advocated increasing the Army to at least 4,000,000 men.

Col. Miles, who came here with members of the industrial college to inspect Pittsburgh district industries, predicted serious consequences unless our national defense is bolstered and said:

"We just can't go ahead and build machines without any thought of how many men we're going to have. The whole business will wind up in a hopeless tangle."

He said an Army and Navy study of United States defense needs over the last 20 years has "developed a definite plan of arming and equipping 4,000,000 men."

Charges "Red Tape"

Charging red tape and delay was binding the Army's high command, Col. Miles said the plan to increase the Army should be put into operation "without a moment's hesitation and on a sane, sensible, well-balanced plan and without political hindrance."

"I speak as an individual," he said, "and not as a representative of the War Department because in my opinion I think it is time the public knew the facts."

Atlantic City, N. J., June 14 (AP).—James H. R. Cromwell, former U. S. Minister to Canada, said today America was unprepared for war because of "Trojan jackasses that stalk the halls of Congress."

"These Trojan jackasses in our Senate and House of Representatives," said Cromwell at a press conference, "lulled our people to sleep for years with their consistent statements that the United States had no interest in what was going on in Europe. . . .

"These Trojan jackasses, who have refused American help of any kind to the Allies are responsible for our present unprepared condition, both materially and mentally. President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull gave them the inside information as to what was going on in Europe a year ago, but yet they continued to mislead the people."

Cromwell, who is now the Democratic candidate for U. S. Senator from New Jersey, added:

"They are either fools or knaves."

U. S. Accepts Gift of Yacht

Boston, June 14 (AP).—That private yachts are being accepted for possible war service was indicated today when the Navy took over, for $1, the 100-foot motor cruiser Gypsy from Robert F. Herrick, Boston attorney.

Under the recently organized Coast Guard Reserve, the Government also has enrolled a number of yacht owners who have volunteered the use of their craft in time of emergency.

Urges Universal Service

Princeton, N. J., June 14 (AP).—Dr. Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University, proposed tonight that all men "between 21 and 45 be liable to be called for military training for relatively brief periods" as a means of bolstering the Nation's defense program.

"Compulsory military training is necessary if an adequate force is to be available for the equipment which the country has determined we are to manufacture for our defense," he said in a radio address.

"U. S. Should Go to War Now"

San Francisco, June 14 (AP).—Dr. David P. Barrows, former University of California president and a retired general, said today "the United States should go to war now."

Addressing a Commonwealth Club luncheon, the holder of military decorations from five European countries asserted:

"What is the alternative? A long period of totalitarian preparation in this country for ultimate totalitarian war in which we would be alone."

Will Launch Tanker

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—A 463-foot, 13,000-ton tanker, the Esso Nashville, will be launched tomorrow at the Sparrows Point yard of the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s shipbuilding division.

The new tanker was built for the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

U. S. Mobilizes Scientists In Defense

Carnegie Expert Heads Committee Named by President

Mobilization of science in the Nation's defense task was given yesterday as the objective in creation of the new National Defense Research Committee, announced at President Roosevelt's press conference yesterday.

Headed by Dr. Vannevar Bush, head of Carnegie Institution, and including seven other members whose names are yet to be announced, the committee, Mr. Roosevelt indicated, will look into all research and experimentation which might help accelerate the defense program.

Army and Navy officers will be assigned to it and Government laboratories, laboratories of private industry and scientific and educational institutions will be asked to help in handling all research problems except those of aviation.

Will Coordinate Activities

The latter will continue under the direction of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics which will, however, cooperate with the research group.

The committee, Mr. Roosevelt indicated, will attempt to coordinate activities of the National Academy of Sciences, the National Research Council and the Federal Bureau of Standards.

President Roosevelt indicated he plans no special reply to French Premier Reynaud's radio request for "clouds" of airplanes from this country. He said he had received no second formal appeal, but the answer was simple—that we are now doing everything we possibly can.

When asked if he thought the United States could extend material resources to the Allies "in sufficient volume and sufficient speed to save them, Mr. Roosevelt did not reply directly, commenting that it would take two hours to answer the question.

Congress Must Act

He was also asked about reports that an embrago may be placed on all exports of scrap iron except to Great Britain and France. In reply he pointed out that Congress has not yet finally enacted legislation authorizing such embargoes.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had heard of no large Japanese orders for scrap iron here, but reminded reporters that this Government's objective is to keep in this country the things vitally needed for our own defense.

The President indicated no particular agency would have to be created to handle the embargo authorization, already agreed to in Congressional conference consultations on that point, he said, undoubtedly would be held with Edward R. Stettinius, member of his defense commission in charge of raw materials. Finally, the whole matter would clear through the State Department, he said.

More than 100 Americans residing in Great Britain made an appeal to Senate Minority Leader McNary asking the United States to send the Allies "planes and more planes, guns and more guns, and if necessary, what is harder still, our men." Mrs. Peter Arno was one of the signers.

Registration of Noncitizens Is Advocated by Jackson

Attorney General Promises Stricter Control of Aliens, but Emphasizes That Their Rights Will Be Protected

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson yesterday called for registration of all noncitizens in this country, and pledged both stricter control of aliens and protection of their rights.

The Attorney General outlined a four-point alien-control policy to the staff of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, at ceremonies marking the agency's transfer from the Labor to the Justice Department.

Along with greater strictness in admitting aliens to the United States, Jackson promised an "increased vigilance at the borders."

Policy Revised

"The doctrine that any person may come to this country unless it is shown that he is a menace must at least temporarily yield to the policy that none shall be admitted unless it affirmatively appears to be for the American interest," said Jackson.

He said that straightforward registration and identification of all aliens is a "simple recognition of noncitizenship common to all countries." He added that it must not be carried out "offensively or oppressively."

"I cannot emphasize too strongly that it is the duty of a department which claims to be a department of justice to deal with the noncitizen in this country without prejudice, without malice, and with scrupulous fairness," he said.

Most of the 3,500,000 aliens here, he said, are loyal to our principles, and "have the makings of good Americans."

"Hateful or unjust treatment of loyal noncitizens may have the result of making them the prey of those who would organize a 'fifth column' here," he declared.

Maj. Lemuel B. Schoenfield was sworn in as administrative officer for the Immigration Service. Its transfer boosts the Justice Department personnel from 10,000 to about 13,700, cuts the Labor Department force of 7,000 about in half.

Bar Fifth Columnists

Springfield, Ill., June 14 (INS).—The Illinois civil service commission announced tonight that members of "fifth column" organizations will be barred in the future from appointment to State jobs.

Shipping Line Accused

New York, June 14 (AP).—An 18-count information was filed today by U. S. Attorney John T. Cahill against the Moore-McCormick Lines accusing the firm of smuggling 18 Portuguese stowaways from Brazil into this port in 1939.

Cahill said the Government intended to hold steamship lines rigidly to the statutory duty of preventing their seamen from landing stowaway aliens in the United States.

The vessels concerned were the Uruguay and the Brazil. Early this year eight of their crew members were convicted of alien smuggling.

Last American Refugee Ships Leave Europe

Exochorda Quits Genoa; Washington Sails From Eire

By the Associated Press

New York, June 14.—The American Export Lines said today their steamer Exochorda sailed from Genoa, Italy, last night with 203 passengers aboard, en route to the United States.

Officials of the line said the ship did not put back to port for additional passengers.

Dispatches from Rome had said 700 Americans from Egypt were on the ship when she sailed from Genoa.

1,000 Flee Ireland

Galway, Ireland (Saturday), June 15 (AP).—The United States liner Washington headed westward into stormy seas from Galway at 4:44 a. m. today (10:44 p. m. Friday, Eastern standard time), bearing more than 1,000 American war refugees to New York.

Most of the passengers were women and children—many of the latter under 10 years of age. Just before the vessel sailed 1,500 gallons of milk were loaded aboard.

Among the hundreds aboard were 40 or more who lacked the $200 passage money and at the last moment were allowed to sign promissory notes after Mrs. Sheila Carr, a native of Dallas, Tex., who has lived in Dublin for four years, and United States Minister David Gray had interceded with the United States Lines.

Capt. Harry Manning of the Washington, today gave the following statement as to what he did when signaled to stop by a German submarine last Tuesday:

"I kept on blinking so as to keep his mind off the torpedo and occupied with our blinker. Apparently it worked.

"My only hope was to stall him along until he could see the ship in the daylight, with the women and children crowded in the boats, and thus make him realize what he was doing."

Citizen Camps To Train 3,000 Businessmen

War Department To School Them In Basic Courses

Special officers' training courses for 3,000 business and professional men between 25 and 50 years of age will be held in July and August at citizens' military training camps, Secretary of War Woodring announced yesterday.

The special instruction was in addition to the plans for training 7,000 Army airplane pilots and 3,600 bombardiers and navigators annually.

Woodring said selection of the civilian trainees will be based primarily on educational qualifications and civic leadership. Trainees will be required to pay their own transportation and living expenses.

Basic Courses Offered

Woodring said training generally will consist of the basic C. M. T. C. course, suitably modified to be applicable to men of more advance age and experience.

Under the pilot training program, basic, advanced and specialized training will be provided at Air Corps training centers at Randolph Field, Tex.; Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., and Moffett Field, Calif. A school for pursuit instructors will be opened December 1 at Barksdale, La.

The House yesterday passed a bill authorizing the President to assign an unlimited number of naval flying cadets to the Navy line while the President signed a bill revising the Army's promotion system and eliminating congestion of some classes of officers arising from the World War.

Observer Staff Increased

The Army reinforced its staff of official observers in South America by assigning Lieut. Col. John Andrew Weeks as full-time military attache and attache for air at Montevideo, Uruguay.

Lieut. Col. Weeks, now on duty with the Sixth Cavalry, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., will take over some of the duties of Maj. Mark A. Devine, jr., at Buenos Aires, who has been attache for both Argentina and Uruguay.

At the same time the War Department assigned Capt. Lester D. Flory, a student at the Army War College, to the United States military mission at Rio de Janeiro.

President Roosevelt last night approved names for the 24 warships to be built under the Navy's regular 1941 fiscal year construction program.

Two 45,000-ton dreadnaughts, largest in the program, will be known as the Missouri and the Wisconsin. It will be the third time a naval vessel has been named for Missouri, and the second for Wisconsin.

Other names chosen were Montpelier and Denver for two new 10,000-ton light cruisers; Essex for the projected 20,000-ton aircraft carrier; the Fletcher, Radford, Jenkins, La Vallette, the Nicholas, the O'Bannon, the Pringle and the Percival for eight destroyers, and the Gato, Greenling, Grouper, Growler, Grunion and Guardfish for six submarines.

President Congratulates 4-H Club Members on Freedom From 'Regimentation' on Surprise Visit to Encampment

Josephus Daniels And First Lady Accompany Him

Dropping in for a surprise visit to the 4-H encampment on the Tidal Basin yesterday, President Roosevelt congratualted several hundred youths for their freedom from the "regimentation . . . of some countries" and thrilled two Kentucky youngsters with praise for Blue Grass ham.

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and Josephus Daniels, American Ambassador to Mexico, the President declared:

"I want to repeat to you what our Ambassador to Mexico just said to me, that there are some countries in the world—without mentioning any names—that are organizing young people for all kinds of work under government regimentation. We in this country are carrying on a great deal of work without government regimentation."

Then, while Mrs. Roosevelt was shown through the camp, the Chief Executive chatted with the two youngsters who approached the White House automobile shyly when he asked to speak to some of the campers.

To Lorraine Harris, 19, of Lexington, Ky., and Byron Tapp, 17, of Henderson, Ky., he said "Kentucky ham is the best in the country." He asked young Tapp the name of the Henderson woman who made a type of ham he liked above all others.

When Tapp was unable to recall the name of the ham specialist, Mr. Roosevelt smilingly reiterated his liking for the Blue Grass State, and then commiserated with Miss Elsie Tomich, 18, of Bushnell, Nebr., over the drought in her native State.

"It's pretty dry out there isn't it?" he asked. When Miss Tomich answered in the affirmative, he asked her what "your Dad raises?"

The President appeared pleased when she told him her father had planted considerable wheat.

With hastily set up photographic equipment focused upon him, the President, in his address, declared, "This organization and other young people's organizations that are run under the principles of self-government instead of regimentation are doing a wonderful job for the United States."

After David Landers, camper from Oxford, N. Y., presented him a program of camp activities, and Miss Elizabeth White, of Mecklenburg County (Va.) handed Mrs. Roosevelt an illustrated book on the 4-H organization, the White House car rolled out of the grounds to cheers and handclapping.

Earlier on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, 52 members of 4-H clubs, who recently reached voting age, pledged themselves "to fight for the ideals of this Nation . . . and never allow tyranny and injustice to become enthroned in this, our country."

The youths from 37 States took the citizenship pledge after H. W. Hochbaum, chief, division of field coordination, Department of Agriculture, declared: "And now we are engaged in a world conflict of ideals which will determine whether democracy . . . can endure."

"Eternal vigilance is the price of democracy" Hochbaum said. "The blessings it bestows come not without obligation. Active and intelligent participation rather than blind allegiance is demanded of us."

4-H'ERS IN HIS EYE—President and Mrs. Roosevelt, driving with Ambassador to Mexico Josephus Daniels in an open car yesterday, paid a surprise visit to the 4-H Club encampment on the Washington Monument grounds. Gen. Miles Tells U. Va. Institute Hitler Made 'Ancient History' of Mass Military Doctrine

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Charlottesville, Va., June 14.—A top-ranking American Army officer tonight frankly admitted that Adolf Hitler's legions have made "ancient history" of a mass military doctrine and called on the United States "to meet the new power of offense by building better offense."

Brig. Gen. Sherman Miles, in an address here before the Institute of Public Affairs, said the Nazi offensive begun May 10 has "completely reversed" the assumption that the defense is inherently superior to the attack.

Jackson Also Speaks

Attorney General Jackson, speaking from the same platform in the University of Virginia's Cabell Hall, described economic planning under a government "bigger than any of the governed" as a vital necessity for American defense.

Jackson warned that the United States must be ready to face a sudden and decisive test of arms or "a long period of narrowing encirclement, accompanied by steady reduction of our friendly buffer states."

In either event, he said, "the economic machine which supplies an army and the social system which backs its morale are most vital parts of any defense system."

General Miles warned that this reversal is not "just a little surprise of the war," but a display of power which the world's general staffs five weeks ago would have considered a "military impossibility."

Speed Surprised Miles

Gen. Miles, who is assistant chief of staff in charge of the military intelligence division, related that he had inspected the Meuse-Albert defense line of Belgium less than a month before the Nazi blow fell.

"I was convinced that no army in the world could break that position in less than two weeks," he said. "In the event it was more nearly 2 hours."

The "real secret" of German success is no mystery weapon but masterly coordination of all arms of the offensive, he asserted, and "the essence of coordination is training." He urged that the United States train "great numbers of men" and accumulate "vast amounts of munitions and more reserves behind them."

From Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, commandant of the Norfolk Naval Operating Base, the Institute heard a charge that "the Japanese philosophy is to conquer the whole Western Pacific step by step and then go on from there."

No War Seen "For Many Years"

The former Assistant Chief of Naval Operations, who said he spoke "merely as an individual," added that "the longer we can keep the Chinese army intact and fighting the Japanese the more secure our own position is."

Admiral Taussig said there is no prospect "for many years" of hostile planes flying the Atlantic or Pacific with war loads of bombs, machine guns, ammunition and fuel. The American Navy and its air arm, however, must be prepared to prevent enemy ships from carrying planes within 1,000 miles of our shores, he said.

He recommended that the United States purchase from Ecuador the Galapagos Islands and develop a major naval base to guard the Pacific approach to the Panama Canal.

Lieut. Col. Herman Beukema, of the West Point faculty, said the growing realization of the country's dependence on imports for certain strategic raw materials is replacing "the smug myth of American economic self-sufficiency."

"Appalling" Defense Deficiency

From Southeast Asia and the West Pacific islands the country draws from 55 to 100 per cent of its tin, rubber, tungsten, quinine and silk, he pointed out.

"Denial of the sea lanes to our commerce would not fail to curtail seriously the ability of the United States to defend either the Western Hemisphere or even our continental homeland, particularly in the event of a prolonged war," he asserted.

America's failure to accumulate big reserves of strategic raw materials is an "appalling" defense deficiency, "in a cruelly realistic world where the possession of weakly defended natural wealth has become the major national crime," Col. Beukema declared.

Attorney General Jackson said democracy "must consciously play its economic order" if it is to rearm without debasing living standards. Friction and incompetence must be eliminated as "unnecessary luxuries," he said, while the profit motive should be retained "as a reward for service to society."

Only the Federal Government, "greater than any of its parts" and unhampered by "narrow legalism," is capable of bringing "our scattered and often conflicting energies to the support of common objectives," Jackson asserted.

Part of the country's ability to organize its economy for defense must be attributed to a series of recent Supreme Court decisions freeing the Government "of unwarranted limitations which gave an unwholesome dominance to the vested private interests as against the public welfare," he said.

Livingston Hartley, author and Washington Post contributor, argued in an address before the morning session that use of the American Merchant Marine and American destroyers to maintain a flow of supplies to Great Britain would be "the surest and cheapest" way to defend the United States, even if it led the country into war.

America now has a temporary condition of peace," which can be regained if lost, but the "American way of life" may be permanently crushed if the Allies are defeated, Hartley asserted.

Muscle Shoals Set for Making Of Explosives

The valley of the Tennessee River, where the Muscle Shoals nitrate plant awaits an Army cue to get into production of explosives, is destined to become the center of America's future defense industries, it was said officially yesterday.

David E. Lilienthal, vice chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority which operates the World War nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala., discussed with President Roosevelt yesterday the role that TVA can play in national defense.

Lilienthal disclosed to reporters the following plans to gear TVA's tri-State valley to rearmament.

The Muscle Shoals facilities for making nitrates, in stand-by condition for seven years, need only a go-ahead signal from the Army to turn from producing fertilizers to explosives. That signal is expected shortly.

Army officers, after inspecting the Smoky Mountain shield that gives natural protection to the valley, have declared it suitable for location of new strategic industries and Lilienthal said the valley would undoubtedly become a first-rank center of these industries.

The Tennessee Valley's power facilities and natural resources are to be used for intensified production of alumina, a critical Army necessity, and other chemicals needed for defense preparations.

The Muscle Shoals plant, finished just after the close of the World War, is estimated to have a nitrogen capacity of 40,000 tons annually. Under plans now forming, Lilienthal said, this power to produce will be made available for Army and Navy needs ,to turn out explosives

Roosevelt to Hear De Chambrun's Report on War

Capt. Count Rene de Chambrun, newly named assistant military attache of the French Embassy, survivor of the "Flanders hell," arrived in Washington yesterday to report for duty and submit a confidential report on European affairs to President Roosevelt.

Count de Chambrun will spend the week-end with the President and later will confer with embassy and State Department officials.

Widely known in Washington from previous assignments, he flew here by clipper to make a personal report at the instigation of Premier Reynaud and Allied Generalissimo Maxime Weygand.

Minister From Thai Arrives Today

NEW MINISTER AND WIFE—M. R. Seni Pramoj will arrive at Washington Airport at 8:30 a. m. today to take up the post of Minister from Thai (Siam). With his wife and two small sons, Seri and Usni, he landed in San Francisco yesterday aboard the S. S. President Taft. Before his appointment, he was a judge in the Imperial Court at Bangkok, a member of the Judicial Council (law drafting body) of his country, and a lecturer in law at the University of Moral and Political Sciences. Questioned in San Francisco yesterday about the change of his country's name from Siam to Thai, the Ambasador said, "We never call each other Siamese. I believe the origin of the word is Chinese"

Standard Gas To Drop West Coast Holdings

Action Follows SEC Order 'To Integrate'

The $850,000,000 Standard Gas & Electric Co., one of nine giant utility holding companies that were told by the Securities Commission in March to "integrate," announced yesterday that it would let go control of properties worth at least $130,000,000 in order to comply with the "death sentence" provisions of the the Utility Holding Company Act.

Standard Gas, with interests that span the continent, told the SEC that it would, in effect, be willing to lop off from its system all properties on the West Coast, confining the company's eventual operations to the eastern and central United States.

Crowley Favors Plan

In a letter to holders of S. G. & E. stock, notes and debentures, Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the board, who is also chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, said of the plan:

"The program has been given thorough study and very careful consideration, and it is our judgment that it is workable and highly desirable. Its accomplishment will result in the retention of valuable income producing properties, a reduced debt, and a simplified capitalization."

Specifically, S. G. & E. proposes to:

Let go the following companies: San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric (assets $46,000,000); California Oregon Power ($41,000,000); Mountain States Power ($25,000,000), Southern Colorado Power ($18,731,000).

Retain as a nucleus for an integrated system the following companies: Philadelphia, Northern States Power and Wisconsin Public Service Corporation.

Possibly sell or exchange the following: Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co. and Louisville Gas & Electric Co.

Keep control of Public Utility Engineering and Service Corporation.

Sell securities of the following group using proceeds to bolster finances and enlarge the integrated system. Deep Rock Oil Corporation, Empresa de Servicios Publicos de los Estados Mexicanos, S. A., Market Street Railway, Pacific Gas & Electric and miscellaneous smaller properties.

Would Simplify System

Officials of Standard Gas & Electric said their plan would accomplish the following:

Eliminate from the company's system six public utility companies operating in six areas.

Reduce the number of States in which the system's subsidiaries operate from 20 to 10.

Eliminate from the company's system nonutility properties not necessary to public utility operations.

Reduce S. G. & E.'s funded debt.

Ex-Major Leaguer Facing Charge Of Housebreaking

John W. Jones, 38-year-old former major league ball player, will be arraigned in Police Court this morning, police said, on a charge of housebreaking.

Arrested in the 3600 block Quesada street northwest, Tuesday, Jones implicated Mrs. Virginia Mary Blatt, 31, wife of Robert C. Blatt, electrical engineer for the municipal architect, in a 7-page statement.

Mrs. Blatt was arrested by Bethesda, Md., police and charged with housebreaking after a quantity of furniture and houhehold articles allegedly stolen from "sample homes" were found at her home. She was released under $2,000 bail. She was rearrested in Washington last night and after being charged with housebreaking was released under an additional $500 bond.

Mrs. Blatt told police she had been an innocent victim of Jones.

Police last night said Jones admitted breaking into five model homes, stripping them of their furnishings. In each case, police quoted Jones, the homes were visited in the afternoon and plans made for the thefts.

25 Restaurant Employes Pray Daily for an Allied Victory

Fifteen minutes a day devoted to prayer for Allied victory abroad is a part of the regular duties for employes of Mrs. Ada Papp's restaurant at 722 Eighteenth street northwest.

Mrs. Papps, a native Swiss, conducts the prayer services herself just before the beginning of each day's business. One of her 25 employes usually volunteers to lead the prayers.

So firmly does Mrs. Papps believe the prayer will halt the Nazi invaders that she advocates a morning devotion period for every American business firm.

She was in Antwerp when first rumblings of the present European conflict were heard and barely escaped before the trouble became serious.

"Although I faithfully believe in prayer," said Mrs. Papps yesterday, "I don't force my employes to take part in the daily services. But everyone of them wants to do it—and everyone sincerely takes part."

Communist Must Stand Trial Here

Dr. Blumberg, Defier Of Dies, Loses Appeal Of Contempt Indictment

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 14.—United States Judge W. Calvin Chesnut today ordered Dr. Albert E. Blumberg, Communist Party leader charged with contempt of Congress, to stand trial in Washington.

The order followed a hearing in which Dr. Blumberg, secretary of the Communist Party for Maryland and the District of Columbia, had fought removal to the Capital on a contempt indictment.

A Federal grand jury handed down the indictment after Dr. Blumberg had refused to answer questions of the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities, before which he was summoned following a raid on the party's Baltimore headquarters in March.

The court today approved Dr. Blumberg's $1,000 bail.

Blumberg's lawyers contended that the subpena issued for him did not constitute a search warrant and that a quorum of the committee was not present when he appeared. They failed in a motion to have sections of the indictment stricken out.

Judge Chesnut said that Blumberg's refusal to answer the committee's question was not based on the constitutional grounds of possible self-incrimination, but on "the mere abstract point" that he was being interrogated about papers seized in the raid.

Four Arrested As Second Still Is Raided Here

Two men and two women were seized and a 100-gallon still confiscated in a raid by a special investigating squad last night on a basement room in the 300 block of V street northwest. It was the second raid on an alleged illicit still in two days.

Samuel (Monty) Montgomery, 42, alleged former employe of the Warring brothers, was at liberty last night under $3,000 bail, charged with possessing an unlicensed still.

With a colored man, Joseph Mills, Montgomery was arrested Thursday night in a raid at 1413 P street northwest, where police said they uncovered a 305-gallon still in the basement. Mills also was released on a $3,000 bond.

Queen Assures French Women Of Victory

'I Suffer Today As You Do,' She Says in Broadcast

By the Associated Press

London, June 14.—Queen Elizabeth in a broadcast in French to the women of France declared tonight that "a nation defended by such men and loved by such women must sooner or later attain victory."

"I, who have always loved France so warmly, share your suffering today and feel it," the Queen said.

She addressed her broadcast "to women of France—of heroic and glorious France, which is defending at this moment not only her own soil, but the liberty of the whole world."

"I give to the women of France," the Queen said, "my sentiments of affection and admiration for their suffering and courage.

Their Sorrows Are Our Sorrows"

We salute their leaders and the soldiers of the French army, who fight with an ardor and tenacity which has never been equaled in history.

"But we are also thinking of the women of France who follow with anguish the developments of this immense conflict in which their sons, their husbands and their brothers are engaged.

"As for me, who have always so loved France, I suffer today as you do, with you. I think often of those warm summer days, during which Paris robed itself with such charm to receive the King and Queen of England.

"With an enthusiasm and generosity which touched us deeply, the people of France became partisans of peace, as did our government.

"I felt the heart of the women of France beating then in unison with mine. It is to these women that I wish to say, on this sad day, very simply, that their sorrows are our sorrows.

"We know that the French women have suffered the loss of their goods, the destruction of their homes, the invasion of their country. We know that they would give willingly all that they have, and also their very lives, to assure the salvation of their country. A nation which has, to defend it, such men, and, to love it, such women, must win sooner or later. She has a right to aid, without reservation, of all the free peoples of the world.

"Ca Va," Pollus Say

"A few days ago, I saw the French wounded and ill, returned from Dunkerque. I spoke briefly in French to each one of them and asked them about their wounds.

"They smiled almost gayly and answered with a short phrase, 'ca va,' 'it's all right.'

"I believe sincerely that a time will come, after these bad days, when these two peoples, having endured these difficulties, and having caught up on their armaments, will be able to say to each other, 'now everything is all right.'

"This is the hope for which I am indebted to the courage of the wounded French soldiers. I give to you tonight the sympathy of all the women of Great Britain, who are prepared, in order to bring about a common victory, to suffer the same sacrifices which speak so much in your honor, and in that of your great country."

aged that it could not reach its base.

Italian bombings of Aden were believed to be retaliation for extensive British raids on Italian bases in East Africa.

"Two small towns in the Sudan were raided with practically no damage," the R. A. F. communique said.

"Malta experienced constant air raids all day yesterday by Italian planes which appeared over the town singly. Two British soldiers were killed and one was wounded.

"R. A. F. activity continued all day yesterday. During one of these flights in East Libya our bombers dropped a number of bombs on Fort Capruzza, which is near the frontier, extensively damaging two defense posts.

"Blenheim bombers raided Assab in Italian East Africa and direct hits were registered on grounded planes. One biplane was destroyed and three other Italian machines subsequently were seen burning. Considerable damage was done to hangars, buildings, trucks and other materials. All our machines returned safely."

Total casualties from air raids on Malta up to 6 a. m. Friday totaled 25 civilians dead and 127 wounded and nine military dead and five wounded. There were nine airraid alarms Thursday. Damage in the raids was negligible and all military objects remain intact.

The first air raid on Valetta, the capital, occurred at 8:30 a. m. today. Duds fell on the six-century-old Knights Cathedral of St. Johns.

Allies 'Repulsed'

By Reynolds Packard
United Press Staff Writer

Rome, June 14.—Italian land forces successfully repulsed Allied attacks on three fronts—the Alps, Libya and Ethiopia—and the Italian air force raided southern France, Tunisia, the Sudan and Aden during the past 24 hours, the Italian high command communique said today.

[A Rome radiocast received in New York said Italian destroyers had encountered French warships in the central Mediterranean and that after "brisk fighting," the French retired.]

[London reported authoritatively that 210,855 tons of Italian ships had been captured, sunk or scuttled since Italy entered the war four days ago.]

French troops were said to have attacked Italian forces guarding an Alpine mountain pass leading into Italy. The attack, on Italian territory was repulsed, the communique said.

Italian aircraft bombed the French air base of Fayence, near Nice, Port Sudan, the port and airport at Aden, on the Red Sea, and Tunisia, the Italian communique said.

[The Rome radio said that the great French naval base of Toulon on the Mediterranean had been bombed again, but today's communique did not mention Toulon.]

Allied attacks on Italian outposts on the Libyan frontier were repulsed with losses, the communique said.

British troops attempting to cross the Ethiopian border from Kenya near Moyale, were thrown back, the communique said, adding "a number of soldiers" were captured in the engagement.

British to Fight On—'Whatever Happens'

out" to obtain post-haste guns and ammunition, even of World War vintage, to supply Tommies streaming back onto the continent on "return tickets" from the disaster of Flanders.

[In Washington, Government officials estimated that the British and French empires still have roughly $7,000,000,000 of "quick assets" with which they could purchase supplies immediately in the United States. These assets include gold, cash deposits and American securities.

[The officials, however, indicated that lack of materials to be bought quickly was much more of a problem to the Allies than the availability of cash for payment.]

At the expense of sorely needed home defenses, the British coupled all their stored-up economic resources with manpower, staking everything on a fight in France far below the abandoned city of Paris.

Sudden Change of Plan

The British decision is a sudden turn from the long war plan aimed at starving out Germany—as was done in 1918—and it comes in the face of Nazi claims that the British blockade of the seas has been broken by the Allied setbacks in Scandinavia, the Low Countries and Flanders.

Government sources disclosed that war funds allocated for years now are released for spending in weeks.

In effect, it is an economic blitzkrieg to meet the piled-up Nazi war stores and men pressing ever deeper into France, and to offset, as best it can, the loss of 75 to 80 per cent of France's steel producing plants, now in German-occupied territory.

Most French ammunition plants, however, are in the south and thus still in Allied hands.

The government now is more concerned with obtaining war materials already fabricated in the United States rather than in pressing for new manufactures.

Obsolete though they may be, the United States' leftovers from the World War are sought urgently to replace the arms lost wholesale to the Nazis in the historic flight from the Flanders pocket.

Speed of delivery is the shibboleth of the new campaign, with the decision of war measured in weeks instead of years.

Flight Over Ocean

The British idea outlined today echoes the plea made late last night by French Premier Paul Reynaud for "clouds of warplanes" immediately swarming over the Atlantic, presumably flying with their own power rather than snailing across in surface ships.

An idea of Britain's prospective "all out" expenditures may be had from an authoritative estimate that her purchases of machine tools alone can swallow the entire export capacity of the United States to the rate of £2,000,000 (about $8,000,000) a month.

The World War weapons sought are those that the United States manufactured toward the end of the old hostilities to replace those obtained by America from the Allies.

Specifically mentioned are American 75s (capable of piercing big German tanks) and the American-manufactured Enfield rifles.

"He Will Turn and Twist"

By the Associated Press

London, June 14.—Official Britain coupled a prediction of an immediate German "peace offensive" with a declaration today that Allied and United States industries would build up "a weight of armaments with which Hitler will be quite unable to compete."

Britain's determination to fight on despite the reverses in France was voiced by Harold Nicolson, parliamentary secretary of the ministry of information, who declared:

"It will not be on the dry land of Europe that this war will be won. It will be upon the seas and in the air, in distant continents, so soon as unlimited resources of the British Empire and of the Americas can be mobilized to turn the scale."

Nicolson, speaking before a Leicester political meeting, declared Adolf Hitler's prohecy that England would be brought to her knees by mid-August "will not be fulfilled."

"And when he finds autumn drawing into winter, and that the great resources of our own industry as well as those the United States are building up against him a weight of armaments with which he will be quite unable to compete, he will recognize that victory is no longer possible.

"Then he will turn and twist in the hope of inducing this country and her Allies to make peace that will be no more real than the peace he imposed on Czecho-Slovakia.

"Hitler will assure the peoples of Great Britain that he has no desire to subjugate their countries," said Nicolson, "but that all he desires is their complete disarmament.

"He will say to us that we may keep our empire, apart from such colonies as he may desire for himself, but that we must abandon our free democratic institutions and accept a government nominated from Berlin and at the same time surrender our fleet to Germany and Italy.

"The moment he obtains our fleet he would sweep upon London and from there would slowly, carefully and thoroughly stamp out the liberties of our countries and reduce our working people to the level of slaves."

The capture of Paris a day before Hitler announced he would, Nicholson went on, "of course is a great triumph for Hitler and a bitter blow to France and her Allies."

French Declared Unbroken

"But although they have captured and may destroy Paris itself they can not rob Paris of its world position or kill something that has lived for so many centuries it has become immortal."

Nicolson asserted that the "main mass of the French army is unbroken" and that Gen. Maxime Weygand "once before in his lifetime had plucked overwhelming victory from the jaws of defeat."

Asserting that the moment must come when the German armored divisions would break down from lack of fuel and men would drop from fatigue, he said: "It might well be that the moment of exhaustion will come as the French hold them south of Paris; the French will entrench themselves until our own army and equipment can come to their assistance.

Simon Confident

"The war will go on to victory or it will go on forever," Lord Chancellor Viscount Simon told a Yorkshire audience tonight.

"This vile and highly organized system of the Nazis which has shown what it can do in Holland, Norway, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia will not change its character if it succeeds in getting a footing here," he warned.

"It is a vile and horrible thing for it denies both in theory and in practice every single thing which is essential to the life of free men and women."

Millions in a Day

Copyright by New York Times

New York, June 14.—The Anglo-French purchasing board spokesman announced that contracts for "many millions of dollars" had been placed today.

Instead of France curtailing purchases as had been rumored because of the capture of Paris by the Germans, this spokesman said that more purchasing experts were being sent here from France. In response to a question relative to the ability to pay cash for purchase, this spokesman said:

"There is no immediate end of our resources in sight. The capture of Paris is a blow, of course, but it does not mean the end of the war. England and France are determined to stop Hitler, no matter how long it takes, as long as they have the means.

"Great Britain and France are both doing their utmost to buy everything available in the line of materials in this country that will be of assistance to them in the war. So long as the war continues and you have materials to sell, we shall do our utmost to buy."

The spokesman disclosed that France has placed an order for 10,000 trucks, costing about $20,000,000, with an American manufacturer. He said that the board is negotiating for the purchase of tanks, but that "nothing definite has been agreed upon yet."

Nazis Expect French Plea for Peace

medy, struck at the fortified line's rear with the capture of Vitry Le Francois and reached the fringe of the Argonne northwest of Verdun, the high command said.

On the fringe of the Argonne Forest the Germans claimed to have stormed Dead Man's Hill—Hill No. 304.

A separate peace, ending the war in France, is "very close," Nazi political quarters claimed, and may be concluded before the end of next week because the battered defenders of France are in headlong flight.

"The total collapse of the French armies may now be expected in the very nearest future," a military spokesman said.

With the occupation of Paris, abandoned by the French as they fled from a steel ring of encirclement, the Germans claimed to hold "the heart of France" and to have shattered French morale.

The Germans were described as hurling all their strength into frontal, flanking and even rear assaults on the Maginot Line's sunken fortresses which the French have claimed can be broken only at the price of 1,000,000 German lives. The heaviest frontal attack took place in the region of Saarguemines.

Not content to parade in the glory of their capture of Paris, where German troops are marching down the boulevards for the second time in 60 years, Hitler's forces pushed on southward on both sides of the fallen city in "pursuit" of scattering Allied forces, it was said by the high command.

The French, said to be in "headlong flight and abandoning great quantities of equipment which cannot be replaced," were pursued south of the rivers Marne and Seine by Nazi tanks that often knifed through and ahead of the retreating French.

The high command gave out no details of the frontal attack upon the 10 to 30-mile deep Maginot Line in the Saar sector, but said that the cornerstone of the fortified line had been knocked out by the fall of Montmedy.

The forces taking Montmedy, 150 miles east of Paris were said to have pushed through the southern fringes of the World War battlefields of the Argonne.

Spanish Army Takes Over At Tangier

Move 'Guarantees Neutrality' in Morocco International Zone

By T. J. Hamilton
Copyright by New York Times

Madrid, June 14.—The Spanish government announced early this afternoon that, "with the object of guaranteeing the neutrality of the International Zone in Morocco," Spanish Moroccan troops had entered Tangier this morning.

It was stated officially that the action was taken with the agreement of Great Britain, France and Italy, who are the other guarantors of the zone under the 1923 convention. As the United States is also a party to the convention, a copy of the note was delivered to the American Embassy here at 12 a. m. The text of the communique follows:

"With the object of guaranteeing the neutrality of the International Zone and the City of Tangier, the Spanish government has decided to take charge provisionally of the surveillance, police and public safety services of the International Zone; and forces of Moroccan troops have entered this morning with this object.

"Al existing services are assured that they will continue functioning normally."

Next to Gibraltar, Tangier occupies a front rank in Spanish territorial aims. For the last few days newspapers here have devoted special attention to it, as being part of the African territory which the French—assertedly with the connivance of the British—took away from Spain.

There are no details here as to the number of troops used in the occupation, but it is assumed they did not meet resistance as the only defense forces there are the international police force, which was created by the Algeciras Convention.

Pennsylvania Delays Opening Of New Highway

Harrisburg, Pa., June 14 (AP).—The dedication July 4 of Pennsylvania's new $70,000,000 superhighway between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg has been postponed indefinitely.

President Roosevelt had been invited to dedicate the 160-mile, four-lane highway at Bedford, midway in the turnpike.

Chairman Walter A. Jones of the turnpike commission announced yesterday that weather conditions had delayed construction. He added it would be completed "certainly before Labor Day."

Ninety-two miles of paving have been completed.

Rhine, coordinated with an Italian offensive in the maritime Alps.

[Allied sources called such a disaster "possible," but said France was so well-armed and prepared in those sectors that such double blows could be struck only if the French fail to hold the German onslaught south of Paris.

[German troop concentrations north of the Swiss border apparently were still there awaiting orders.

[Neutral sources said the French had little to fear from an Italian land drive across the Alpine fortress regions but that the valleys of the Dormance and Rhone Rivers might be reached by air.

[In this connection reports circulated in Switzerland that both German and Italian parachute troops had arrived at Italian air bases in the provinces of Piedmont and Liguria.]

The last hours of Paris as a free city of France were described sadly here today by a few of those civilians who had stayed on there almost to the end.

They told of small groups of men—unwilling to leave in the face of any disaster—still sitting in alternate sun and shadow at the boulevard cafes; of a city filled with a great and unaccustomed silence where only the police still stood guard.

The high command did not say specifically where the German effort to storm the Maginot Line occurred, other than that it was west of the Saar River, nor over how wide a front.

But the stretch westward from Sarreguemines, where the river joins the line, to Montmedy, the line's western extremity, is 77 miles.

This frontal attack apparently was intended to coordinate with the turning operation effected by the Germans.

Basel, Switzerland, June 14 (AP).—Wary of German offensive preparations at Baden, the French shelled German West Wall positions on the opposite side of the Rhine sporadically through the morning and then laid down their regular bombardment this afternoon.

The French fire in the afternoon came every five minutes from their Rhine positions.

Main objectives of the shelling, as usual, were German rail lines and the German fortress in Istein Rock on the opposite side of the Rhine Rapids.

Apparently conserving ammunition, the Germans did not reply, except with occasional bursts of machine gun and rifle fire against French observers.

U-Boat Sinks British Armed Merchant Ship

Tars Heroically Man Guns to Last; Sub Believed Destroyed

By the Associated Press

London, June 14.—The armed merchant cruiser Scotstoun, mortally wounded by a torpedo, sank today, but guns manned by men waist deep in water were believed to have taken revenge against her submarine attacker.

Even when shells had to be carried over their heads to keep them dry, the British navy men aboard the former Anchor liner Caledonia served her guns, and they were not silenced except by waves which sent clouds of steam up from their heated barrels.

Six Men Go Down

Two officers and four seamen were not saved, but their rescued comrades believed they "got" the submarine while their own craft was settling slowly.

The 17,046-ton vessel formerly made the New York-Glasgow run and world cruises. She was a sister ship of the Transylvania.

She was the third such armed merchant vessel lost by Britain in the war. Like her, the 16,697-ton Rawalpindi sank with her guns blazing in a fight with the German pocket battleship Deutschland last November 23, and the 20,277-ton Carinthia was reported sunk last week.

While the navy chalked up this new loss and gained a new tradition on the seas, British planes ranged far today in Europe, Africa and the Near East, carrying the war in the air to Germany and Italy and their outposts.

R. A. F. Loses Five Planes

The Royal Air Force lost five planes in attacking German bridgeheads of the Seine and another went down in strong bombing attacks on German lines of communication from Rouen to the Maginot Line.

In addition, the admiralty declared that the naval air force scored hits on the German battleship Scharnhorst in Trondheim Fjord early yesterday.

Britain's naval stronghold at Malta underwent another air raid which caused damage in the city and residential quarters of Valletta. Unexploded bombs are becoming a "nuisance" there, the British said.

'Fence of Flame and Steel' Prevented Rescue of Allied Troops at St. Valery

'Dawn Flotilla' Straggles Back To England

By Jack W. Culmer,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

A Southeastern English Port, June 14.—A motley "dawn flotilla" of one-time pleasure craft straggled back home today from a new "excursion to hell."

Boats ranging from cabin cruisers to putt-putt speedsters set out across the English Channel three days ago to go to the aid of some 6,000 Allied troops trapped at St. Valery-en-Caux, down the French coast from Dunkerque.

But they came back almost empty handed. The Germans saw to that with a fence of flame and steel laid down along the fog-shrouded St. Valery Cliffs. The only ones saved were the soldiers who rowed 4 or 5 miles off shore in whatever kind of boat they could grab.

A volunteer who joined the fleet told upon his return how German bombers and land batteries laid down a fierce bombardment off shore, making it suicidal to attempt to reach the main body of trapped Allied forces.

Rescues 15 Poilus

His tiny craft, which crept across the choppy Channel at dawn, did succeed, however, in getting back 24 hours later with 15 Poilus. There had been 17, but two were wounded severely by machine-gun bullets and died soon after being lifted into the boat.

There is no room in a lifeboat for dead men, so the weary oarsmen, needing every ounce of strength for the long, hard pull to England, gave their bodies to the sea.

"It was bloody murder," said this volunteer. "The miracle of Dunkerque was not to be repeated. St. Valery has high cliffs, not a beach like Dunkerque. There was a heavy fog, the sea was rough, and the Germans were ready for us this time."

"It was like sending toys out to fight tanks," said one volunteer, who had been under fire for the first time in his life. "My cabin cruiser was in the starboard tow. We got across the Channel without much trouble but there was fog like a shroud right along the French coast—fog reddened by the dull glare of fires ashore and pierced incessantly by the flares of gunfire from coastal batteries."

Planes' Bombing Inaccurate

"It was broad daylight when we got across," said another. "That is, as far across as we got, and the Jerries were not going to let us get away with another Dunkerque.

"Their planes must have spotted us almost at once but their bombing was inaccurate.

"A tin hat—issued to each volunteer before the trip started 'in case it rains' . . . isn't much protection so far as I can see, and it certainly did rain—a rain of steel and fire.

"I didn't see anyone actually killed, but it is no pleasant sight or sound to be near a man with a bullet in his belly.

"I don't know how many planes there were at one time. But they came in waves and we didn't have any peace until we were back on this side of the Channel.

Noise "Most Alarming"

"The noise was the most alarming part of the whole show to me, a civilian under fire for the first time, but I suppose one gets used to it.

"Answering the call from across the Channel, the admiralty rapidly organized and manned several flotillas of small craft—tugs, cabin cruisers, fishing boats, converted lifeboats—and placed a young naval officer in command of each flotilla of about a dozen vessels.

"There was sprinkling of naval ratings (seamen), seasoned boatswains and gunners to form a hard core for the crew of each boat but the personnel mostly was volunteers.

"Some of them had been at Dunkerque. Although the trip was designed as a rescue expedition these volunteers were determined to make it an offensive operation if the opportunity arose.

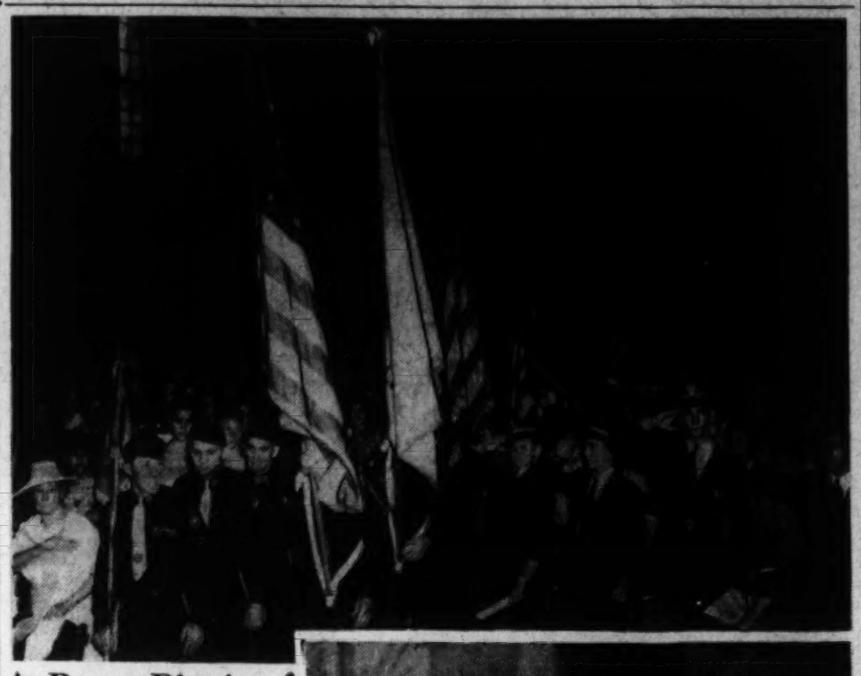
"Mounted in each craft was a Lewis machine gun, its base hastily screwed to the deck and its crew put through a rapid course of instruction that in some instances lasted only a few minutes.

Coast "Literally Ablaze"

"We didn't have an awful lot of ammunition but we let fly with it whenever we got a chance. Some of the men who had been at Dunkerque had service rifles and some had revolvers but they weren't used.

"A Lewis gun eats up ammunition and you need several thousand rounds if you want to fire more than a few minutes."

The flotillas suffered varying fates but most reported the French coast was "literally ablaze" with coastal batteries and planes laying down a curtain of fire which kept the ships from getting nearer than four or five miles to St. Valery.



At Peace, District Salutes the Flag

fascism."

The exercises at which Capper spoke were conducted by the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, under sponsorship of the Woman's Relief Corps and other organizations. The Navy School of Music Band played, and the invocation and benediction were by the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, chaplain of the American Legion.

At a Flag Day celebration at the Elks Club, District Attorney Edward M. Curran said the United States "became a great Nation" through its "openhanded welcome to the outraged and oppressed" and warned that "we shall remain a great Nation only by protecting ourselves against those people who would destroy such tolerance."

"We must," he said, "relegate to oblivion all destructive forces of the many 'isms' that are being promoted by the demagogues who seek to destroy by pulling down our democratic institutions. We must know, we must respect, we must fight for only one 'ism' and that is 'Americanism.'"

The District of Columbia National Guard and the National Park Service held a brief ceremony in Rock Creek Park at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets last night, opening the park service's campfire program. A detachment of the 121st Engineers, commanded by Col. John W. Oehmann, formed a color guard, and Col. Oehmann, representing Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, guard commander, spoke on "The Significance of Flag Day."

McNutt Gives Talk

Employes of the Department of Justice were relieved from duty for a half hour yesterday afternoon to attend exercises in the department's great hall, where Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator, was principal speaker. He was introduced by Solicitor General Francis Biddle.

McNutt posed the present world conflict as one between the democratic way, "the kind of world and the kind of life which the Almighty God . . . had intended it to be," and "a new set of values."

"'Vigorous people,' we are told," he said, quoting a recent statement of President Getulio Vargas, of Brazil, "'fit for life must follow the route of their aspirations.' And to achieve these aspirations they must 'remove the rubbish of dead and sterile ideas.' Democracy and self-government, the ideal of personal freedom, of the dignity and worth of the common man, must be swept aside as the superstition of a bygone age.

"Dictators Are Deceived"

"And thus it is that the greatest libel ever uttered on democracy is articulated by men incapable of grasping the meaning and significance of a mode of living that has done more to liberate mankind from the jungle than anything else since that lonely Man of Nazareth trod the silent shores of Galilee 2,000 years ago."

In conceiving the vision "that moved our forefathers to proclaim for all time the equality and brotherhood of man" to be "the sterile dream of a barren race," he said, "dictators are deceived."

"They do not understand America's strength because they do not understand the secret of our strength. They mistook deliberation for indecision. They confuse a love for the ways of peace for weakness in the face of war. They misunderstand a hatred for regimentation for an inability to impose self-discipline; a love of liberty for incapacity for coordinated action."

"We Know Our Power"

America, he declared, "has no fear because we know our power and our strength. We know what can be done with the iron and the copper, the oil and the timber, the farms and the factories and the mines of the richest country in the world.

"And we know the folly of nations which salvage the accumulations of American junkyards to forge instruments of warfare with which to challenge and defy our freedom . . ."

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, speaking at exercises in the Departmental Auditorium arranged by Department of Labor Post, No. 42, American Legion, called for calm thinking in face of Europe's holocaust. He said he would never vote for a declaration of war or a move in the direction of war except for the Nation's defense.

He was introduced by Gail T. Judd, general chairman, who also introduced Post Commander Robert L. Duvall and Lewis W. Bon, chairman of its Americanization committee. Bon presented a medal to Daniel J. Sullivan, of Gonzaga High School, for his work in a recent legion oratorical contest. The exercises were preceded by a parade of school children down Constitution avenue.

Kingsman School, Fourteenth and E streets northeast, held its formal flag-raising yesterday morning, when patriotic pageants were presented by pupils, accompanied by the Kingsman Chorus and assisted by the Roosevelt High School Band and the glee clubs of Eliot Junior High School. A Flag Day assembly and pageant was held at Wheatley Elementary School with more than 750 children taking part.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, addressed the Central Businessmen's Association at its luncheon at the Hamilton Hotel, which was made a Flag Day observance.

Don't Conscript Firemen, Asks Chief Porter

Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter yesterday advocated exemption of his men from conscription in case of war as word reached local circles that methods of combating incendiary bombings are being carefully studied by fire-protetcion experts in this country.

"I am not an alarmist, and I fervently pray this country will not become involved in any war, but I can vividly recall the last war when some of our best men were called to the colors only to create vacancies which had to be replaced by inexperienced men," Porter said.

The fire department of any community is vital in the national defense program, Porter said, and pointed to lessons being taught now in Europe where fires have continued to burn and spread because engines and trucks were caught in their houses when raiders bombed a city.

Porter warned that any "fifth column" activities would be vigorously fought by his department.

"Even in peacetime we have firebugs, but during a war crisis we must ever be on the alert for the fifth columnists," he said.

It was learned the International Association of Fire Chiefs is making a careful study of effects of incendiary bombings and will make a report to the War Department in the near future.

Porter said fire caused by the bombs are "next to impossible" to extinguish. "We can prevent the fire from spreading," he said, indicating the local fire department has been busy studying this situation.

Allies Still Can Win, Says Emil Ludwig

Blames Debacle On Conservatives, French Socialists

By Jane Cochran,
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, June 14.—Speaking slowly, weighing the measure of every word, Emil Ludwig tonight bespoke optimism that the Allies would eventually win the war—but, he said, if he is wrong . . . if Germany should triumph, a pan-Germanic war with the United States is certain within the next few years.

"The Allies can hold out eternally," said the man whose biographical classics include the three totalitarian rulers—Hitler, Mussolini and Stalen—and who is equally famed for his monumental works on Abraham Lincoln, Napoleon and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Yes, they can hold out eternally and by next November they should enjoy a mechanical superiority over the Nazis."

U. S. "May Fight Alone"

Ludwig said assurances to that effect were given him personally by Premier Reynaud of France. But, he warned:

"If those assurances are not borne out, if Hitler wins this conflict, then you—the United States—will be fighting a war with the pan-Germanic world, either by invasion of this country or in South America, by 1943 or 1944.

"I believe America must come in to save this war, or face war alone by herself a few years hence."

Ludwig also painted a picture of Mussolini as jealous of the skyrocket rise of his star pupil, Hitler, whom Ludwig said is heartily hated by Mussolini.

"Mussolini cannot come out of this alliance with his present power," Ludwig predicted. "The Italians hate the Germans. They remember the papal publication of Polish atrocities. The whole Italian situation depends on Abyssinia. The average Italian did not approve of that campaign or the lives sacrificed, and, if Italy loses Abyssinia, Mussolini loses his power in Rome."

The British, he added, now are "all around Abyssinia."

Returning to the Allies, Ludwig declared they can win with material aid from the United States.

"You Must Not Expect Pay

"And you must not expect pay for this. They are fighting your cause," he said. "The situation now is contrary to that of 1917. Then the Allies needed men. Now the Allies do not need men, but materials."

The sad plight in which the Allies find themselves is directly traceable to Baldwin, Chamberlain and the Conservative Party of England and to the Socialistic regime of former Premier Leon Blum, of France, Ludwig charged.

The Conservative Party, with the aid of such men as Chamberlain, Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Stanley Baldwin and Sir John Simon, in their fear of Communist influences in Great Britain, misled France in her rearmament program against the inevitable conflict.

Declaring "you cannot have reform in time of crisis," he blamed the political obligations of the Socialist Party for part of France's unpreparedness. Shorter working days and social improvements, he said, hampered the arms program.

Tokyo Paper Assails Allies' 'Hold' on Siam

By Hugh Byas
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, June 14.—A suggestive attack on the non-aggression pacts concluded between Britain, France and Thailand (Siam) appears in today's newspaper Asahi. It is asserted that Thailand was forced to conclude those pacts and it is held that their effect will be to prevent Japan from obtaining bases in Thailand for use in a war against the British Empire.

"In case of an Anglo-Japanese war, Britain will prevent Thailand from offering Japan military bases within Siamese territory," the newspaper says, "and the pacts also avoid the danger that Siam might attack Singapore, Burma, British India and British Borneo. By this means England tries to provide for the security of Australia and New Zealand. France similarly seeks to maintain the status quo of French Indo-China and New Caledonia."

Appearing in Japan's leading newspaper, those comments cannot be explained as irresponsible speculations. Official inspiration will doubtless be denied, but Ashahi's remarks reveal a national attitude of mind that will intensify the suspicions not only of the large powers with interests in Asia, but of the small Asiatic nations that Japan aspires to lead.

Meanwhile, the Japanese government tonight requested all powers having citizens residing in Chungking, Chinese government capital, to remove them to places of safety on the south bank of the Yangtze to avoid risks of bombing. It was intimated that Tokyo would not accept responsibility for damage inflicted as a result of any disregard of this warning.

The notification was conveyed to the United States, Britain, France, Belgium, Russia and Germany. Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita declared that, to create trouble, the Chinese government had built military establishments and erected antiaircraft guns near third-power properties. As Japanese are continually bombing those military objectives, the powers named were requested to remove their nationals to prevent untoward incidents.

Germans Clank Into Paris, Pass the Arc de Triomphe

Nazi Victory Parade Swerves Around Historic Arch, Berlin Reports Say; Hitler Himself May March Under It

By Joseph W. Grigg, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer

Berlin, June 14.—German tanks today clanked across the Seine bridges, past the Arc de Triomphe and down the Champs Elysees into the heart of Paris at the head of the first cavalcade of invaders to enter the French capital in nearly 70 years.

Flanked by armored cars, the dust-stained tanks swung triumphantly into Paris from the northwest to spearhead the bloodless occupation of the "City of Light," German accounts said.

It was the eighth invasion of Paris in history, and the first since Bismarck's legions trod the broad boulevards in 1871. The jubilant German press proclaimed the fall of Paris to be the "symbol of decision" in Adolf Hitler's western offensive.

Destruction to Be Avoided

"German soldiers will give an example of clean, military behavior," authorized spokesmen said. "They will avoid all unnecessary destruction."

The advance into Paris through the suburbs of Argenteuil and Neuilly and on beyond the aristocratic West End began early in the morning, the Germans said. It was exactly five weeks after the massive western offensive began with the German drive into the Low Countries.

The tanks rumbled between thin lines of tense and silent Parisians, the Germans said. Reports from the French capital estimated, however, that probably one-third of the city's normal population of 2,800,000 had remained.

Antitank Units Follow

Behind the tanks rolled antitank units, still dusty and laden with evidence of the furious fighting to the north.

As the long shadows of the morning retreated, more and more Nazi contingents streamed into the capital, evacuated by French armies hoping to save their beloved Paris from the fate of Warsaw.

Motorized infantry, riding in steel-shielded trucks mounting machineguns to command the broad streets, converged from the Seine bridges to the Etoile.

In that hub from which radiates 11 streets, stands the Arc de Triomphe and its Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where flickers the eternal flame.

Nazi reports indicated that the victory parade through Paris swung around the Arc de Triomphe in its progress down the Champ Elysees. Speculation suggested that the honor of being the first to march beneath that historic arch might be reserved for Germany's self-styled first soldier, Hitler.

The great arch, started in the course of the Napoleonic triumphs, is a 160-foot pile of stones, each bearing the name of a victory or a hero in French military history.

Radio Stations Taken

Nazi officers at the head of the procession took over headquarters of French officials still in the city, it was said, and radio stations.

The French police, fire and other city departments were said to have placed themselves at the disposal of the Germans to maintain order during the occupation.

Yugoslavia Frees Pro-Nazi Ex-Premier

Stoyadinovic's Release Indicates Swing to Axis

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, June 14.—The sudden liberation of former Premier Stoyadinovic of Yugoslavia, long known as "Germany's friend," from his enforced residence in a village in the Serbian mountains was learned today from a high authority.

Stoyadinovic, who was detained in April on charges linking him with Nazi German activity in Yugoslavia, was said to have been freed at the beginning of the week. He came immediately to Belgrade, where there are strong reports that he is conferring with Slovene leaders in the hope of forming a cabinet friendly to the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Stoyadinovic was interned April 19 after Yugoslav authorities announced they had discovered a plot to overthrow the government and turn the country over to the Nazis.

His release was seen as evidence that the government of Premier Cvetkovic, like other governments of southeastern Europe, is reconciled to an Axis victory over the Allies and is taking quick steps to smooth over any previous differences with Italy and Germany.

The release of Stoyadinovic and a dozen others who had been held in an old hospital building in Zagreb was believed a part of a general amnesty preparatory to an important switch in foreign policy.

Informed quarters said some of the present leaders who have been friendly to the Allies are ready to get out of the cabinet so Yugoslavia can "reorient her policy in line with the new Europe."

A.M.A. to Dispatch 10 Tons of Medical Supplies to Allies

By the Associated Press

New York, June 14.—Ten tons of medical equipment were scheduled today for shipment from the American Medical Association's annual exhibit for the relief of France and England.

Exhibitors of more than 400 commercial firms voted to send vitamins, hormones, drugs, foods, instruments and other medical supplies from the exhibit direct to France on the first boat available. The collection will represent a contribution of more than $500,000.

Even the wooden packing cases in which many of the exhibits were shipped to the meeting will be included, officers of the exhibitors' organization declared, because requests have been received for such materials from France.

1,000 Dolls To Get Child 'Mothers'

Church Women's Council Plans New Educational Summer Program

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

Christianna is the name of more than 1,000 dolls which will be given out for "adoption" this summer by the Washington Council of Church Women, of which Mrs. Frank A. Linzel is president.

Yesterday, Christianna dominated the "doll day" meeting of the council at Calvary Baptist Church. She occupied all of the rooms adjoining the Sunday school auditorium. She had been dressed by the church women and, although she was of uniform size, (just big enough for a little girl to cuddle tight in her arms), she appeared in many different characters. She was a Scotch doll, sailor girl, a baby with daintily feather-stitched clothes, a Red Cross nurse with uniform including the cape; Dutch girl, and even a bride with all her attendants.

In other years, each little girl to whom a doll was entrusted on the pledge to "be a good mother" to her, named her own "child." This season, it was decided, as the doll adoption project is a program linked with Christian education, to name all of the dolls Christianna.

Etta Mai Russell Describes Plan

Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker of the council, under whom the plan was inaugurated three years ago, explained yesterday that doll centers would be opened July 8, at churches in various areas where there are underprivileged children. The little girls will go there to participate in a program of recreation and to receive their dolls. The instruction they are given in being "good mothers"—to sew for their dolls, cook for them, keep them clean, put them to bed early, and so forth—is designed to teach simple lessons in child care and to reach the mothers through the children.

The doll is the opening wedge into the home where the church women desire to extend friendship and assistance when necessary. Miss Russell said that one of the functions of the program would be to acquaint people in each area with the free services in health recreation and assistance available to them—services many do not use because they do not know of them, it has been found.

Mrs. Richard A. Sauer presided at the luncheon which preceded the program yesterday, and also received the dolls from representatives of the various denominations. Little Eleanor Panteloin, seated in a diminutive rocking chair on the platform, sang Brahms' "Lullaby" as the dolls were presented.

The program traced the development of child care in the District from the time the Capital City was founded. Mrs. Linzel presided. Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan discussed the period from 1700 to 1840; Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, 1840 to 1900; Mrs. O. B. Atwood, 1919 to 1940, and Miss Edith Rockwood, of the Children's Bureau, discussed the recommendations of the White House Conference on "Children in a Democracy."

Where Policeman Was Slain—Children He Leaves

Policeman Slain By D. C. Truckman

ploying his brother, said Thompson accused him of speeding.

Second Park Officer Slain

Thompson was the first U. S. Park policeman shot to death attempting to make an arrest in the history of the force, and the second slain in line of duty.

Private Milo J. Kennedy was beaten to death at Logan Circle about seven years ago when he was ganged upon by a mob of colored youths.

According to witnesses, five bullets were pumped into the policeman after he had been wrestled to the ground, with his assailant standing over him. The first shot was fired into the ground by Thompson in a futile attempt to cow his prisoner.

Tragedy Reconstructed

Mrs. Louise Thompson, wife of the native-born Washington policeman, reached the hospital too late to see her husband alive.

As reconstructed by police, aided by numerous witnesses, the tragedy opened with the park policeman pursuing the truck up First street northeast to reprimand the driver for a minor traffic law violation.

William E. Shearin, a cab driver, of 385 Seaton place northeast, said both truck and pursuing car passed him at great speed. He said he saw the truck, near the I street intersection, veer sharply to the left, forcing Thompson onto the curb.

Officer Hit in Face

The policeman leaped out, pulled the truckman out and then was struck in the face, according to Shearin.

"Put him in my cab," the hacker said he told Thompson.

The policeman began to push Brocker toward the taxi when the latter broke loose and struck Thompson again, knocking him down. When the officer drew his gun, the prisoner yelled, "That doesn't scare me," according to Shearin.

Thompson fired a warning shot int othe ground but the truck driver boldly dived at him, grabbing his wrist. Shearin said he made as if to grab Brocker but desisted when Thompson warned, "You're going to get hurt."

Scores Witness Fight

The two men rolled over and over on the ground, in full view of scores of witnesses, many of them homebound from Government offices. Suddenly the colored man broke free, with Thompson's gun in his hand.

According to Edward J. Sherman, of 57 I street northeast, who came out of his house on hearing the commotion, he saw the truck driver fire five shots into Thompson's body.

Meantime, a passerby, Eugene Thrailkill, of Alexandria, had rushed to a nearby corner to summon Pvt. Ewell Wade, on traffic duty. Wade ran up to see the truck driver, Thompson's gun still in his hand, fleeing northward on First street.

The traffic officer said he fired a shot at the fugitive but that did not stop him. The second shot also missed but brought Brocker to a halt, letting the slain policeman's gun fall to the ground.

Fights Six Policemen

Metropolitan Policemen R. E. Mauft and T. E. Marquis, arriving in a scout car, took the prisoner, resisting fiercely, in charge. It took six policemen to load him into a patrol wagon, in the course of which he allegedly attempted to grab the gun of Policeman L. A. Hartnett, whose shirt was torn and necktie yanked off.

Five shots entered Thompson's body, all taking effect in the back.

Born in Washington on January 30, 1898, Thompson was reappointed to the United States Park Police force on March 3, 1933, after a previous period of duty. He had lived at the Evarts street northeast address for 30 years.

Thompson's was the third gunshot fatality among Washington policemen since Wednesday afternoon, when Private Otho L. Blackwell of the Twelfth Precinct shot his superior officer, Sergt. Charles F. Cummins. The latter died almost instantly and Blackwell succumbed early Thursday.

Officer Thompson leaves his wife and four children: Keith, 18; Joyce, 16; Ivan, jr., 10, and Kenneth, 14. Keith and Joyce are students at McKinley High School, Ivan at Langley Junior High and Kenneth at Taft Junior High.

His was the third death in the family in less than a year. An aunt died in January and another aunt, Mrs. Agnes Hardy, was injured fatally last month in a staircase fall.

Brocker was arrested last August 26 and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon after he had stabbed Edgar Marshall, 28, of Hyattsville, Md. Marshall told police he had tried to put the colored man off his truck on New York avenue northeast, when the assault took place.

Jacket Designed by General Seen as Huge Saving for Army

Maj. Gen. J. K. Parson's Creation May Replace Present Field Coat; It's Light and Inexpensive

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 14.—Because a major general turned clothes designer, the Army may save thousands of dollars and speed up its production of much-needed uniforms to a point never before attained.

Third Corps Area headquarters announced today that a new field jacket, designed and developed by Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, commanding general of the area, would be issued to one division of troops for experimental purposes.

The jacket, intended to replace the coat worn by troops in the field during cold weather, weighs only slightly more than half as much as the coat and is much warmer. Cost of the new jacket would be $5.50, compared with $7.65 for the coat.

In addition, only five sizes would be required to fit individuals, against 32 sizes required now.

Outfitting of one streamlined division of 15,000 men would represent a saving of approximately $32,000, officers said.

The exceedingly light weight of the garment—one pound, nine ounces, against three pounds, two ounces for the coat now used—is its biggest advantage, which, combined with its added warmth, make it especially suited to infantry, officers explained.

Navy Yard Wage Hearings Concluded by Review Board

A Navy review board yesterday wound up open hearings on proposed wage changes in navy yards and other field stations, and prepared to meet Tuesday to begin drafting recommendations for the Secretary of the Navy.

Before the board were labor requests for sweeping increases in pay of skilled labor in navy yards. Officials estimated that these requested increases would average about 20 per cent.

Preparation of their report will take two or three weeks, officials said, and the board is likely to study methods for reducing the present total of about 9,000 separate pay rates for different types of skilled workers in the Nation's naval establishments.

Short on Mechanics

Among the groups requesting pay increases, representatives of the machinists asked for a general 20 per cent boost in the wage scale, with differential increases for special types of work.

N. P. Alifas, president of District Lodge 44, of the machinists, told the board that the wage increases had become "urgent" to prevent hampering the national defense program. For months, he said, the navy yards had been unable to find enough mechanics, and he estimated that only one out of five eligible for work are willing to accept it at the present rates.

Besides the 20 per cent increase, Alifas asked that the night shifts in the navy yards receive 10 cents an hour over the regular rate until midnight, and 15 cents an hour extra for the shift from midnight to 8 a. m. He urged eliminating the present third class of pay rates, and setting a 6-cent hourly difference between the first and second classes.

Levels of Pay

Alifas asked that aircraft mechanics get the same pay as machinists, and for toolmakers, instrument makers, and optical instruments makers he advised 15 cents an hour more than machinists. Pay for diemakers, he said, should be boosted to around $2 an hour.

He urged a "substantial" increase for machinists at the Washington Navy Yard. Their committee, he said, had presented data showing that the average wage for machinists in private industry in Washington was about $1.43 an hour, while the maximum rate at the Navy Yard was $1.056 an hour.

German Embassy in Argentina Praises Vargas' Speech

By the United Press

Buenos Aires, June 14.—Nazi satisfaction with Brazil President Getulio Vargas' speech Tuesday was revealed today in a "war bulletin" issued by the German Embassy here.

The speech, interpreted in some quarters as a defense of fascism, was praised as valiant," by the bulletin.

Regarding President Vargas' reference to "vigorous peoples," "dead and sterile ideas," and a "tumultuous and fertile new era," the widely distributed bulletin carried a dispatch from Berlin which said:

"It is not accidental that those valiant words were announced by the chief of one of the greatest and most advanced American nations. Over Brazil's virginal territories has arisen a new strong state whose people are free from prejudices."

The latter sentence was a reference to the new state proclaimed on November 10, 1937, by President Vargas. At the time the new regime was branded in many foreign countries, particularly the United States, as Fascist, but this was vigorously denied by Brazil.

The embassy bulletin was issued less than 24 hours after an official Brazilian communique said President Vargas' speech was intended for home consumption only and was not to be regarded as defending any foreign ideologies.

The communique added that the speech was not a reply to one made the night before at Charlottesville, Va., by President Roosevelt.

The communique said:

"The discourse pronounced by President Getulio Vargas on the eleventh of the current month does not make any modification whatever in the international policy of Brazil.

"It had as its sole object the internal life of this country and to call attention of Brazilians to the transformations which are occurring in the world and justifying, thereby, the necessity of strengthening the state economically and militarily. The President of the republic also sought to awaken the spirit of his countrymen, warning them against dismay and pessimism.

"With respect to general ideas regarding the political, social and economic organization, what we said merely reiterates previous assertions. The speech was a warning and a call to reality—a speech which disconcerts routine spirits accustomed to easily acquired daily comforts."

The Roosevelt and Vargas addresses were compared and contrasted by La Prensa, South America's leading newspaper. In an editorial entitled "The Old Faith in Liberty and the New Philosophy of Force," La Prensa praised Mr. Roosevelt's stand for maintaining the old faith in liberty.

America Comes Of Age

Five weeks ago yesterday, in the early morning of May 10, the advance guard of the German armies crossed the Belgian, Dutch and Luxembourg frontiers. Today, with the swastika flying over Paris, these armies are sweeping south and west through the heart of France, carrying all before them, sweeping aside a crumbling resistance which for all its heroic gallantry is clearly doomed.

The history of our times shows no parallel for this stupendous German victory. There is no precedent for the amazing organization, the smashing power, the almost superhuman energy with which a small and impoverished country has burst through its frontiers, has broken down all resistance and now tramples the prostrate civilization of France.

It is not surprising that many Americans are dazed by the tempestuous speed with which this revolutionary force has altered the map of Europe and opened a new chapter in world history. Uninstructed as to the strength of the explosive forces which have been slowly gathering in central Europe, we are naturally unprepared for the shattering effects of the detonation which has occurred.

The country is, however, conscious of the enormous influence of what is happening upon our destiny. Gone, gone with the wind, are those fatuous illusions, those complacent attitudes with which many of us have been accustomed to confront the future. Across the Atlantic, no longer as broad as once it seemed, a red and stormy dawn is breaking. It presages a day in which many American lives will follow lines of a novel and probably not always welcome nature.

The war is by no means over. There is still fight in gallant France, and Great Britain has probably not yet put forth her maximum effort. But whatever the trend from now on, one conclusion is inescapable. There will be no return, for this country, to anything like the pre-war apathy. There will be no possibility of dodging the more active part, in a far less congenial environment, which the United States will be called upon to play.

New ideas and new forces, strange, unwelcome and fundamentally disturbing, have burst from Pandora's box and will not easily be recaptured and restrained. For many a day, and in many ways, they will operate to challenge incessantly the intelligence, the patriotism, and the institutions of our people.

A testing period, such as is seldom given a generation to endure, now lies ahead. To meet it successfully will require sacrifice, courage, good judgment and above all integrity of purpose. By the resolution, and by the consistent cooperative effort with which our people meet this test, will be determined the place to be occupied by the American Nation when a measure of world stability succeeds the present torment.

Merely A Beginning

The alacrity and unanimity with which the Senate has answered the President's request for $50,000,000 to aid the European war refugees indicate at least that the urgent necessity of getting the relief job under way rapidly is recognized. What may not even yet be so clearly recognized is the gigantic size of that job.

The war relief appropriation is, of course, over and above the $20,000,000 the Red Cross is now attempting to raise. Moreover it will be some time before it is translated into foods, medicines and supplies. But it had best be realized that the sum of these two figures represents but a meager fraction of the ultimate cost of feeding, nursing and otherwise caring for the victims whose millions cannot yet be estimated. How much basis of fact there may be for reports of impending famine in Europe is not clear. But certainly neither famine nor plague can be dismissed from possibility.

The question of relief administration and methods presents a problem hardly less tremendous than that of providing in addition to the Red Cross some other funds. Happily, there already exist highly trained and effective organizations whose experience could provide a basis for the elaborate relief machinery. The Friends' Service Committee, for example, is already at work in France. It was, at last reports, still able to purchase adequate supplies there. But the drain on its resources is enormous and increasing. In short, a contribution to the Friends' Service Committee seems at this moment the quickest method of sending American aid to France.

Subversive Action

By a vote of 330 to 42 the House has approved a bill ordering the Attorney General to deport Harry R. Bridges, West Coast labor leader. No charges were brought against Mr. Bridges other than general accusations that he is a "trouble-maker," and an "undesirable" alien with communistic leanings.

Mr. Bridges has already been absolved of charges that he has been agitating for the overthrow of our form of government. After long and exhaustive open hearings James M. Landis, dean of the Harvard Law School, concluded that Mr. Bridges was neither a member of, nor affiliated with, the Communist Party and that his activities as a labor leader were in accord with democratic principles.

Not only did the House ignore these official findings but the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization did not even accord the accused man a hearing before reporting favorably upon the bill for his deportation. In the course of the debate it was said that this is the first time a bill aimed exclusively at the punishment of one man has come before Congress. That is not surprising, since our Government is supposed to be one of laws.

What is almost past belief, however, is that a legislative body sworn to uphold democratic principles should be so misguided as to approve a measure subversive of the fundamental principles upon which our constitutional form of government rests.

There was difference of opinion among members of the House as to whether the deportation bill could be regarded as a bill of attainder, banned under the Constitution of the United States. Legal hair-splitting on this issue can be left to the lawyers. But patriotic citizens will hope that if this bill is enacted the Supreme Court will quickly sweep aside the legal casuistry by which its supporters seek to deny law-abiding aliens rights guaranteed to them as "persons" under the Constitution.

The bill to deport Mr. Bridges is, in any case, an example of the kind of legislation the founding fathers sought to prohibit in banning bills of attainder. What Justice Story has to say on the subject is enlightening. Bills of attainder (i.e. legislative acts which inflict punishment without judicial trial) "have been most usually passed," he says, "in times of rebellion or of gross subservience to the Crown or of violent political excitements, periods in which all nations are most liable . . . to forget their duties and to trample upon the rights and liberties of others."

Those words have a prophetic ring. For the House in its zeal to safeguard cherished institutions has voted to trample upon individual rights and liberties. The fact that the prospective victim is an alien is no excuse for such conduct.

If emulation is the sincerest form of flattery, then Hitler and Mussolini should extract great satisfaction from the unprecedented action of the House. For the Congressmen who voted to deport Mr. Bridges, after he had been cleared of charges of being illegally in this country, are certainly following totalitarian methods of ridding the state of "undesirables."

A number of Congressmen maintained that they might deport an alien simply because they did not like the color of his eyes or his hair. If that view is accepted how long will it be before Congress extends its purge to eliminate citizens, who, for any reason, or for no reason, have become objectionable?

Much more than the wholly unimportant future of Harry Bridges is at stake in the present instance. His foes as well as friends can meet on common ground to oppose an action which is utterly repugnant to everything for which America is supposed to stand.

Labor And The Law

The Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union has become party to a consent decree under the Sherman Antitrust Act. The organization itself was not under indictment but various local unions had been charged with conspiring with employers' associations to restrict the sale of tile. The international union has, therefore, agreed to police its locals and to assist the antitrust division and the courts to enforce the provisions of the consent decree on a Nation-wide scale.

This agreement is regarded by the Department of Justice as a most important forward step in the elimination of unreasonable restraints in the building trades. It may, indeed, presage the end of A. F. of L. resistance to the efforts of the Department of Justice to break up "unholy alliances" between employer and employe groups in that field.

In the Apex hosiery case the Supreme Court decided that assessment of damages against the union involved was not permissible. But at the same time it indicated that labor unions are not exempt from the antitrust laws. With this advance notice that the Supreme Court would not uphold the contention that unions are exempt from the antitrust laws, the way has been cleared for continued, vigorous prosecution of offending trade unions by the Department of Justice.

The fact that the bricklayers' international union has been thus forewarned does not mean that its decision to cooperate with the Federal authorities is any the less commendable. It is entitled to credit for voluntarily undertaking to see that its members abide by the law. For it is to the advantage of labor as well as the community to abolish restraints of trade that raise building costs and thus destroy opportunities for employment growing out of a flourishing and expanding business.

Reply To Reynaud

It is not correct to say that the United States Government is making no formal reply to Premier Reynaud's almost frantic appeal for American assistance to avert the collapse now imminent in France.

Our Government has very promptly passed comment on the French premier's anguished assertion that his democracy, on the verge of dissolution, can properly turn to this democracy and say "We have claims on you."

Uncle Sam answered M. Reynaud, even as the latter was speaking amid the tragic chaos of his temporary capital at Tours, and answered him in precisely the same language. "We have claims on you," the Department of State told M. Reynaud, for unpaid installments, arrears and interest on war debts remaining from the last war.

It does seems ironic, to put it mildly, that the Administration should have had to choose this particular moment to remind France that tomorrow she owes us nearly $100,000,000 in interest and amortization on her theoretically funded debt of over four billions. Just at this moment the chances for payment do seem somewhat unfavorable—so much so that all sense of decency is outraged by this dunning note.

Secretary Hull, however, had no choice in the matter. To that kindly gentleman, as to the American public as a whole, it is utterly humiliating to have presented this bill to a nation which lies all but prostrate in the path of Germany's victorious armies. But the Secretary of State was without option.

Congress has time and again refused to cancel or further modify the debt agreements. And in transmitting the current demands for payment to France and Great Britain the Secretary of State was merely following obligations imposed on him by Congress.

The wholly unrealistic, the fantastically stupid, attitude of Congress on the war debt issue will not be forgotten when the time comes for assessing the fundamental responsibility for what is happening now. No single factor, except that of the impossible reparations which France and Britain tried to exact from Germany, has more responsibility for the international chaos to which Hitler is the logical sequel.

At the moment, however, the war debt issue is most important as providing the American answer to Premier Reynaud's "final appeal." There is "no further sense," he said, in further French resistance if France, now beaten to the ground, can see no hope of united action in behalf of democratic ideals.

To that the reply of the American Government is a reminder that M. Reynaud's government owes us $4,000,000,000, on which interest, arrears and an installment of principal are due and payable today.

Rhythm Of Summer

For those in tune with nature, the sound of the first cicada marks a season more definitely than the robin. Regardless of the solstice, when that long, sleepy and monotonous drone beats on the air we know that spring has ripened and passed. It is the rhythm of summer.

The cicadas have made their local appearance coincident with the hot weather of the past few days. But they are not expected to be numerous in the District in 1940. This is the year for Brood No. 14, which inhabits the Appalachians. Our own 17-year locusts, Brood No. 10, crawled out of the ground in 1936; their offspring went back to Mother Earth and will not emerge until 1953.

Entomologists are not sure why the cicadas are more numerous in different areas in different years, but they guess that regional catastrophes have wiped out the broods. On the seventeenth anniversary of a great forest fire there might be no cicadas in the areas affected. The gentleman is as sluggish as he sounds, and cannot fly fast or far enough to repopulate devastated sections in a hurry.

The cicada, which got the name of locust through some confusion of the Pilgrim Fathers, is a harmless musician. He quaffs amounts of sap which are never missed and serenades his mate all day long by vibrating a membrane under his stomach. When he gets tired of his skin he sheds it on a limb and leaves it, a fierce image of himself, for children to collect.

He really is a bemused and genial fellow, who, if he has any message for us, is merely saying that it is too hot to get overexcited about anything.

Few are so impolite that they interrupt money when it talks.

War Motives

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Italy has declared war on the Allies. The reason as set forth in your editorials, and I agree with you, is that Italy wants to get a cut of the new colonies and markets when a peace is signed.

It is for an identical reason that some of our American best people are crying out for an immediate declaration of war on Germany and Italy. Others are crying out for all possible aid to the Allies—a step which in the last war ultimately led us to sending aid in the form of men. The American people, who will do the actual fighting in the trenches, should beware of these warmongers and reiterate again and again their desire for peace and the settlement of domestic problems. BERNARD ALBERTS.

Ulster's Part

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President De Valera issues warning to any power that might seek to invade his country; apparently he is indifferent as to what happens to England.

Ulster, on the other hand, is doing something about it. During the current year Northern Ireland will contribute $20,025,000 to the imperial exchequer. Already over 100,000 Ulstermen have joined the British army, air and naval forces as volunteers. Ulster's shipyards, employing over 20,000 men, are going full blast to aid in the cause of freedom and democracy. Northern Ireland is doing all this with a population of only 1,250,000.

Eire was pro-German in the last World War; she is not pro-Ally in this. ULSTER PAT.

America For Americans

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson's call to Congress to immediately let the blood of America's youth on foreign battle fields is just about the most disgraceful thing that has appeared in a newspaper since the war between the thieves of Europe—the German Empire and the Franco-British Empire—began. Miss Thompson in true Goebbels style castigates our American democracy and shrieks at Congress, "You have been influenced by the democratic hatred of war." Away with the "democratic hatred of war, you must go to war now."

It is for these same predatory reasons that the Roosevelt Administration is arming to the teeth. Kill off the youth, what difference does it make? Western civilization as Wall Street knows it will be preserved. Roosevelt isn't interested in defense at home. He wants to outdo the European aggressors by sending an army abroad. Decent people who have a "democratic hatred of war" demand that the Administration stop its moves toward war. Not a cent must be granted to the Allies in loans. No airplanes, guns or implements of war. America needs decent housing, health facilities, jobs for the unemployed, not war in foreign countries. GILBERT CARTER.

Washington, June 7.

"Telling" England

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Ernest Lindley's column in The Post of June 7, "Is the Lion Growing Soft?"—even the title, considering the circumstances—aroused in at least one reader a feeling of shock. It is not the first time that Mr. Lindley's column has aroused such feelings, nor the first time I have known him to express such sentiments. Not long ago Mr. Lindley intimated that the United States should let England know that we would not permit her, whatever the circumstances, to surrender the fleet.

One does not need to be English or particularly English loving to feel somewhat appalled at some of the statements which are broadcast to the world in times like these. A great many of the things which England's severest critics have said of her in the past 20 years, and particularly in the past 20 months or so, are true. But alas, so are many of the things the British have said about us!

Mr. Lindley's awakening in regard to America's peril would be amusing if it were not so serious, duplicated as it is by millions of other Americans who likewise had no use for so-called idealism in international relations and are beginning to see, probably too late, that idealism and national safety are not antagonistic, but that the one, applied in time, might have preserved the other.

As for the English fleet, I cannot for the life of me see where we have earned the right to tell England anything. When the pot comes to calling the kettle black, there would not seem to be much choice. England has been governed by unimaginative, rich, deadly dull old men—and so have we, as anybody knows who visits or even reads the proceedings on the floor of the House or Senate. The President was a "warmonger" only yesterday, Dorothy Thompson was hysterical, the Army and Navy were always ringing false alarms. The really dependable leaders of this Republic were the Nyes and Clarkes and Wheelers, and rabid isolationism was the first—and best—bet of any man who thought of running for the Presidency.

We live and learn, and we pay in dear coin for our mistakes. But just now, when nations are fighting for their very lives, the part of courtesy, not to say decency, would seem to be to keep very quiet and to be very meek. We have hardly, at this juncture, earned the right to be anything else!

Playing Our Own Hand

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you permit one discordant note to mar the celestial harmonies uttered by Mr. William Allen White and his chorus of sweet singers?

I can assure you that many feel as I do. My conviction is that most Americans feel as I do. Unfortunately most of them are voiceless and most of them are puzzled. They may be swept into war by such nonsense as Mr. White and his fellow committeemen and women utter before they can organize themselves to stand up for peace. To make my own position clear, my folks have been in this country as long as Mr. White's folks. I know something of what war is from four years of experience. I have had first hand contact with the Germans in war. They are ruthless. But the war in which they are now engaged is not our war. If we are to take up arms because we are infuriated by cruelty and treachery and greed in this case, then if we are to be consistent we must broaden our field and take up arms in every other similar case, no matter what other peoples are involved. If, however, we commit ourselves only to come to the aid of France and Great Britain when they are attacked, then let us do it in a workmanlike fashion. Let us enter into a treaty with them for mutual defense and, of course, offense. There is no better time than the present if that is our national desire. But let us implement it. In that case we may be able to share the booty as well as the blood and cost. In any case we will get a large share of the debt.

If we are to take up arms then let us go about it in a practical fashion. Let us prepare to defend ourselves at home. Let us recognize that no other nation, at any time, ever went to war except to serve its own national purposes. Britain and France have never served ours. We have been good friends with them. We all hope we will be again. But neither Britain nor France ever made a gesture toward helping us unless their own national interests were concerned. And they were right.

The most cowardly and shameful thing uttered by Americans at this time is that for years we have been sheltering under the wing of the British navy. The American Navy and the British navy worked in harmony at times in support of national interests, but from the time the first Roosevelt began to put some pep in our Navy it has been, year for year, as good as the British navy. In 1921 we sank boats at the instance of the British which would have made our Navy the best in the world. It is time we began to display a little of the national spirit we talk about and place ourselves in a position to take our own part. No one ever heard that we were protected by the British until they needed us in 1917. If they are defeated no one will ever hear of it again, unless we fail to read the lesson of the day.

If we are to "process" 60,000 men for pilots, as some have said, in the next year, we have not one-tenth enough planes for the training. If we can step up our production so that we can safely spare some planes, by all means let us sell them to the Allies. Most of us—99 per cent of us—want to see them win. But our own safety should be our first thought. We have 2,500,000 old rifles. Some of them date back to the Spanish War. If we can spare some of them let the Allies have them. But if we should be forced into war we could need 4,000,000 rifles inside the first year. Let us begin to build some artillery for our own use. We have not enough on hand right now to defend Boston.

All of us, broadly speaking, favor the Allies.

But let us be sane and realistic and keep our shirts on. Let us, for heaven's dear sake, not be forced into war by a bevy of psalm singers. Let us get down to business and play our own hand.

HERBERT COREY.

Mussolini's Move

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While not always agreeing with the President in his name-calling, I am with him 100 per cent in his "stab-in-the-back" epithet. That will go down to posterity with "horse and buggy days," and a few other happily coined phrases and will stick like a plaster to the "chief of the Italian nation."

I have for a long time tried to say in the press and in private that of the two men, Hitler and Mussolini, the latter was the man of lower morals and ideals. His reference to "sterile and fertile" peoples should be enough to make him an outcast to decency everywhere.

Hitler had some reason to try to extricate himself from a situation superinduced by an unfortunate treaty which Italy had part in fastening on Germany. But Italy attacks France and the Allied group, by implication, solely and only on a grab basis. Mussolini admits as much in his bravado speech to his people. The spirit of that speech is: "While the pie is being cut, I'll demand my piece!" J. O. KNOTT.

Numbers Boy

Archie, the numbers boy, was often in our garden. After his daily visit to the kitchen, he would come down to get a flower for his coat, or to see how the peonies were getting along. He had a special admiration for peonies and Japanese iris, and every spring collected a basketful of each.

Our best friends were sometimes disappointed because Archie had been ahead of them, [illegible] it became our duty to point out that Archie, unlike themselves, was sometimes helpful in the garden. He would pull a weed now and then, rake a few leaves, or do a little hoeing, with the hoe well out in front of him, where it could not throw dust on his shiny shoes and the cuffs of his beautiful pale green suit.

At other times he would stand outside my workshop window, ducking the bumblebees and acquiring wisdom on the gravest subjects, such as whether gin is more wholesome than whisky. This was dreadfully important to him, for he had ulcers of the stomach. Other questions on which he consulted me were the nature of art, how to write a story, and should he become a writer.

On the last point, I was very clear that he should. Having considered his taste in clothes and liquor, his acquaintanceship with the police, and the great pleasure he took in the sound of his own voice, it seemed to me a little strange that he had not tried to be a writer long ago.

I had heard of Archie often before I met him. There was a legend about him in our neighborhood, and all the stories were based on the fact that he rejoiced in gardens and loved to fight. He had been in hundreds of fights, single encounters and battles royal, in all the alleys of downtown Washington. Once he had been shot; and another time he had been stabbed in the arm. Neither experience worried him very much. But when someone hit him in the mouth and knocked out his front teeth, he swore vengeance. He told me all about it through the workshop screen.

He said, "You know, I don't know yet who hit me, or what with. Whoever it was, he didn't hit me with his first. No, sir, I don't believe any man could hit me that hard, and hurt me that way, with his fist. He hit me with the butt of a gun or something like that. Somebody else had me around the head, and I couldn't see. But I've got my suspicions—you know—I can't tell for sure—but I have an idea about one man. I think it was that fellow, but, of course, I can't do anything until I know for sure. I'm going to find out. Yes, sir, I'll find out. And then I'm going to kill him."

I suppose I looked a little doubtful at this point, for he said, "Ho, you think I'm just talking big, and I know it sounds that way. But I wouldn't waste your time telling you something I don't mean to do. Then you wouldn't think so much of me when I didn't do it. So when I find out for sure, I'm going to walk up to him, just as friendly, you know, as if I suspected nothing. I mean to shake hands with him. Then I'll ask him to have a drink, and get him in just the same condition I was in when he served me. You know? Yes, sir!"

After that, he preached me a sermon, enriched with numerous quotations from the Bible. He said, "I've preached at more than one meeting. Yes, sir. And I read the Book ever day; yes, sir, almost every day. There's my three sisters, they go to church because of what I told them, out of the Book. I'm not a practicin' man myself, but I try to live by what the Book teaches. 'For I know my iniquity, and my sin is always before me.'"

I said, "Archie, when you cool off a little and settle down, you will undoubtedly become a preacher."

"What you mean now? I have settled down. Yes, sir, I've been married four or five years, and I aim to stay married. We've got a little apartment of our own, and we get along fine. Yes, sir. We hope—we aim—to do what's right. You know? Yes, sir!"

Well, that was Archie. He was sick off and on that winter, and when he got better, the numbers business was being harassed a little by the police. It happened every year, but this time, taken with his illness, it seemed to discourage Archie.

He said, "You know, I've got to get out of this business. I don't like it. It's not good for me. I'm going to be a writer! I've got to get out of this!"

He bought two new suits of clothes to cheer himself up, and he came out to get a basketful of peonies. I wish now that I had given him a bigger basket, because I never saw him again. Before the Japanese iris bloomed, his ulcers had killed him.

War Materials

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the last two years or so, we who give more than lip service to democratic ideals and principles have heard and read via the radio and newspapers, that the Allies have not been able to secure in this country battle-worthy planes and other war equipment in quantity. This is a fact. Why is it so?

We have gleaned from the same sources that the Allies have been refused modern planes, that they would have to pay for experimental work on others, build factories for us and then buy the output on a strict cash and carry plan.

From the same sources we have learned of endless discussions as to whether we should let the Allies have some of the rusting since the last war merchant ships and obsolete military equipment of 1920, and we have noted that whilst we have confined these matters with the Allies to discussions, we have been handing over war equipment to Japan.

The bald fact is that today France and Britain—deserted by the United States of America—are fighting the crucial battle of this war, and if they go down to defeat from the sheer weight of the nations now opposing them, God help this country. We shall need it but so ill deserve it.

Privileged Slander

JUDGE FERDINAND PECORA of the New York Supreme Court has given a timely ruling that it is not libelous to call a Communist, or anyone else, a Communist while the Communist Party enjoys legal status, with the right to place on the ballot its candidate for public office, including the Presidency. That decision disposes, temporarily but perhaps not finally, of a doubt which has hampered discussion of conspirators against the Nation who like stickup men, kidnapers and the like, use false names to cover their activities and claim to have been hurt—usually $250,000 worth—when they have been identified in print with their expressed beliefs and sympathies and known activities.

With the cautious reservation that, on appeal, some higher court may decide that communism is personally disreputable, while collectively legal, I now present another interesting problem which imperils the good name of any citizen.

I refer to the Congressional immunity by which members of the National Legislature and, I believe, of the State law-making bodies as well, are given the right not only to utter the most vicious and outrageous slanders on the floor but to print them in the official records and, further, by connivance with certain newspapermen to procure their further and much more harmful publication in the public press.

ABOUT TWO YEARS AGO Senator Sherman Minton, an Indiana New Dealer, in a bit of a pet about some personal controversy with a newspaper owner, offered a resolution, which was no credit to his intelligence, whereby any publisher would have had to guarantee and on demand to prove the truth of any matter printed in his paper—a measure which, as someone pointed out at the time, would have forbidden publication of the Bible.

It was a frivolous and petulant bill, and Senator Minton did not press it, but the incident called attention to the fact that at the very hour of offering a measure intended, as he said, to punish wanton defamation he himself was one of a very small group of Americans who are legally licensed to lie about anyone who displeases them, even to the extent of the most shocking accusations without the slightest evidence to back them up.

That is true, as every Senator and Representative knows, and that the license is seldom abused does not impair the fact that the reputation of no American is legally safe from slander from this quarter. The citizen cannot call the Senator or Representative to account or sue him for the purpose of refuting a slander and proving that it was uttered in malice and for personal or political revenge.

The unpleasant reality and the further fact that the Congressional Record may be and has been used for purposes of blackmail have to be accepted.

My question, however, is whether by quoting truly from the Congressional Record, which is without doubt a public record, a newspaper or blackmail publication of the public press may clothe itself with the immunity that was intended for members of Congress for a legitimate purpose. This immunity was intended for members of Congress alone, so that they might be free to express themselves in debate.

IT CERTAINLY was not intended to relieve journalists or publishers of their ordinary responsibilities under the libel law. And the fact that the Congressional Record is a public record does not wholly answer the question, because it is a fact that some documents of public record are not covered with privilege and are to be printed only at the usual risk.

It would be wickedly unfair to hold that because allegations have been placed on file in a legal petition in the office of the clerk of a county court the press has a right to print them without responsibility. If this were permitted any vile person might use the courts for no other purpose than to defame and no intention to present evidence in support of the charges. Moreover, in certain types of cases affecting domestic relations and juvenile offenses the papers are sealed and, although they are public records, may be published only at the risk of severe penalties for contempt.

Although I have been told that the Congressional Record is wholly privileged, I have learned of no decision on the point and have heard that the question, like the one which Judge Pecora dealt with, is still open. To me it would seem that although the Congressional Record itself cannot be edited or suppressed, a liberty to quote slanderous matter from the Record in the public press has the effect of extending Congressional immunity, with its right to lie and slander, to persons for whom it never was intended.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Generation That Was Duped

A FEW DAYS AFTER the Nazi invasion of western Europe, Mr. Ernest Lindley explained in a column why he, formerly a convinced isolationist, had come swiftly to the conclusion that "we have ample reason to oppose Hitlerized Germany" by giving assistance to the Allies. "My answer is bluntly," he wrote, "that we have not prepared ourselves against the downfall of British sea power."

In making this statement, Mr. Lindley, who is 41 years old, went on to say that his generation, the World War generation as he calls it, do not respond to the "moral" judgments of the older men but only to concepts of national interest." Therefore, as long as the older men were complaining about aggression, lawlessness, faithlessness, oppression, Mr. Lindley was too realistic to be moved. But when he saw that Hitler might destroy or capture the British fleet and obtain possession of its shipyards and its bases, Mr. Lindley understood the danger to this hemisphere, and instantly abandoned the isolationist doctrine which he had held until a few weeks ago.

THE QUESTION I should like to put to Mr. Lindley, and also to discuss myself, is this: why did he, and those of his generation who have thought as he does, fail to understand the American national interest until it was so nearly fatally imperiled by the Allied military disaster in Belgium and Flanders? They are, he has told us, too realistic and too sophisticated to be bamboozled by any idea which is not directly concerned with the physical security and economic well-being of the American people. For 20 years they have specialized in making themselves hard-boiled, buncombe-proof, unbamboozleable, antiseptic to flag-waving, deaf to the bugles, so that they would never be deceived about the real national interest of this country. Yet after this careful education in realism, it was not until Hitler was at the Channel ports that Mr. Lindley discovered that we have a national interest in the maintenance of British sea power and that "we have not prepared ourselves against the downfall of British sea power."

Must he not confess, if he means to be candid, that what he thought was cold realism has proved to be a curtain which hid from him the truth, the very truth about our national interest, which, he so confidently believed he was specially trained to discern? I am sure he will not wish to confuse the question by saying that he was misled into believing that the Allied defenses would stand better than they have. That is not the point. It, as he now says, it is our national interest that British sea power should not fall, then it was also our national interest two months ago when the Allied defenses were still intact. Yet until those defenses were broken, Mr. Lindley did not tell his readers that the American national interest was involved. In other words, as a young realist he saw our national interest only when it was already very dangerously imperilled. Is it not evident that Mr. Lindley and those who think as he does have been somehow bamboozled while they supposed that they had learned to debunk all things?

WHAT IS IT that has prevented the young realists from being realistic until it is very nearly too late? It is, I submit, that the post-war generation have been duped by a falsification of American history. They have been mis-educated by a swarm of innocent but ignorant historians, by reckless demagogues, and by foreign interests, into believing that America entered the other war because of British propaganda, the loans of the bankers, the machinations of President Wilson's advisers, and a drummed up patriotic ecstasy. They have been taught to believe that anyone who challenges this explanation of 1917 and insists that America was defending American vital interests is himself a victim or an agent of British propaganda.

Yet the history which Mr. Lindley's generation have been taught is false history. It is not true that America entered the World War because of the British propaganda or the British loans. America entered the World War because Germany's declaration of unlimited submarine warfare threatened to blockade and starve the Allies and to destroy British sea power. I venture to say this categorically and on the basis of direct personal knowledge of what determined President Wilson's decision.

IN FEBRUARY, 1917, I was an editor of the New Republic, a paper which has in recent years devoted many of its energies to proving to Mr. Lindley's generation that its founders were misguided fools. In February, 1917, the editors of the New Republic knew at first hand what was in President Wilson's mind, and this is what they wrote in the issue of February 17, 1917, under the title "The Defense of the Atlantic World."

"The safety of the Atlantic highway is something for which America should fight. Why? Because on the two shores of the Atlantic Ocean there has grown up a profound web of interest which joins together the western world. Britain, France, Italy, even Spain, Belgium, Holland, the Scandinavian nations, and Pan-America are in the main one community in their deepest needs and their deepest purposes. They have a common interest in the ocean which unites them. They are today more inextricably bound together than most even as yet realize. But if that community were destroyed we should know what we had lost. We should understand then the meaning of the unfortified Canadian frontier of [illegible] protection given Latin America by the British and American fleets . . . And now that she (Germany) is seeking to cut the vital highways of our world, we can no longer stand by. We cannot betray the Atlantic community by submitting. If not civilization, at least our civilization is at stake.

"A victory on the high seas would be a triumph of that class which aims to make Germany the leader of the East against the West, the leader ultimately of a German-Russian-Japanese coalition against the Atlantic world."

Mr. Lindley will remember that those words were written before our entrance into the other war, and in the light of what he realized just two weeks ago, I ask him which of the generations, the war or the post war, saw the more realistically the vital interest of America in the maintenance of British sea power?

NO DOUBT it will be said in retort that since President Wilson regarded the maintenance of British sea power as a vital American interest, he was obviously himself the victim of British propaganda. But those who say this are merely betraying their abysmal ignorance of American history.

Even they will agree, I think, that if there has ever been a true American who was not likely to be the victim of British propaganda, that man was Thomas Jefferson. He was the author of the Declaration of Independence. During his life he twice supported an American war against England. Along with Washington he provided the ideas and the very phrases which from the founding of the Republic have defined the separation of the American from the European political system.

In 1823 the victorious Holy Alliance was threatening to reconquer the Spanish colonies in this hemisphere which had recently proclaimed their independence. Simultaneously, to the west of us Russia was threatening to extend its power from Alaska down the Pacific coast. Then, as now, this hemisphere was threatened on both sides by a coalition of victorious imperial states, and it was under those conditions that President Monroe, acting through our Minister in London, entered into negotiations with Canning, the British Foreign Secretary. The negotiations began in August, 1823, and the results reached Washington on October 9, 1823. They provided for some kind of joint American and British policy to forbid the Holy Alliance to enter this hemisphere.

President Monroe sent the documents to Jefferson who studied them for a week and replied that while "America, North and South, have a set of interests distinct from those of Europe, and particularly her own" there is "one nation" which "could disturb us in this pursuit; she now offers to lead, aid, and accompany us in it. By acceding to her proposition, we detach her from the bands, bring her mighty weight into the scale of free government, and emancipate a continent at one stroke, which might otherwise linger long in doubt and difficulty." Supported by Jefferson's approval, President Monroe in a message to Congress on December 2, 1823, proclaimed the Monroe Doctrine.

SO I SUGGEST to Mr. Lindley that in recognizing the American interest in British sea power, he is not the victim of British propaganda and of hysterical chatter. He is seeing what Wilson saw 25 years ago and what Jefferson and Madison and Monroe saw more than a hundred years ago, long long before Lord Lothian came to Washington.

Advertising Steady Despite 'Total War'

Chicago, June 14.—The shocks of the "total war" in Europe and unsettled conditions throughout the world have had little effect upon retail business and retail newspaper advertising in America, according to Advertising Age, which today released figures showing that the total volume of retail newspaper advertising in 80 major cities during the week ended June 1 was only 1.4 per cent below the level of the corresponding week of 1939.

For the 22 weeks since the first of the year, retail newspaper linage in these same cities is 1.5 per cent ahead of last year, and 2.9 per cent above 1938 levels, Advertising Age says.

Volume for the week ended June 1 totaled 17,295,709 lines, a loss of about 240,000 lines compared to the total for the corresponding week of 1939.

SHIPS OF THE ITALIAN FLEET

Operations of Italian submarines and cruisers might hamper the British and French fleets so that Axis vessels could run the Allied blockade. Under our Neutrality Act Germany and Italy would have the same right to buy munitions in the United States that is accorded Britain and France. In this connection, Felix Morley calls attention to the new powers of the President to govern exports

The Italian Threat

By Felix Morley

Editor of The Post.

The Duce's Navy Vs. Our "Neutrality"

IT IS on the sea that Italy's contribution as a belligerent is likely to prove most important. And it is as a factor affecting the vital issue of naval supremacy that Mussolini's declaration of war is causing most concern in Washington.

The Italian army, though large and fairly well equipped, is not expected to play a leading role in the campaign against France. It has already served the German cause successfully by immobilizing large numbers of French troops in the Riviera, Tunis and the Near East. The air force, with some 5,000 modern planes and perhaps twice that number of experienced pilots, is more likely to see energetic action. But it is on his navy that Mussolini relies most in his stated ambition "to break the territorial and military chains that confine us in our sea."

Unlike the Italian land forces, the power of the navy of that country cannot safely be underestimated. Particularly strong in cruisers, destroyers and submarines, it is in the last two important categories superior to the French fleet, although somewhat inferior to that of France in battleships. All the Italian warships are well designed, well built and manned by trained sailors of a race which is naturally seafaring. Ship for ship and man for man, the Italian navy does not need to ask for odds from any other.

While relatively indifferent to the navy when he first took over the government, Mussolini has for the past ten years concentrated on making it a strong and efficient weapon. That effort has been popular with the Italians, to whom dominance in the Mediterranean seems a most natural and laudable ambition. The determination behind the Fascist claim to "Mare Nostrum" is not discounted by any American naval officer who has studied Italian sea power.

OF COURSE the Allies will not be intimidated by the Italian challenge in the Mediterranean.

The exact size of the fleet which the British and French have concentrated in that inland sea to meet this challenge is unknown, but undoubtedly it is stronger than the whole Italian navy. Most of the warships of France are now on station along the southern coast of that country and the British have squadrons both at Gibraltar and Alexandria. In a modern Trafalgar, with each side throwing every warship it possesses in the Mediterranean into action, the Italian navy might well be obliterated, at terrible cost to the victors.

But just because it would be manifest folly for Italy to invite so decisive an action, nobody anticipates it. The Italian strategy is more likely to be one of attrition, picking off individual Allied warships by submarine action or airplane attack whenever opportunity affords. And in this form of naval warfare the advantage would lie with Italy, primarily because the Allies cannot provide anything like the same airplane support in the Mediterranean area.

The Italian advantage, moreover, is greater than appears at first glance. For it may well prove increasingly difficult to reinforce the Allied fleet in the Mediterranean. The narrow waters to the east of the Straits of Gibraltar provide an ideal location for submarine operations. Beyond this the British and French, in spite of their seemingly great preponderance over Germany and Italy in fighting ships, may soon have no surplus to divert for operations against Mussolini.

This is particularly true in the case of the British fleet. The naval losses admitted by the Admiralty to date are not very severe. They amount to 1 battleship, 2 cruisers, 2 aircraft carriers, 18 destroyers, 7 submarines and a number of auxiliaries. If this list is complete there is no reason to question the official British statement that the balance of naval strength remains greatly in favor of the Allies.

The German claims of sinkings, which in total would put about half the British navy at the bottom of the sea, are doubtless highly exaggerated. But lately there have been indications that conditions are permitting the Nazi fleet to become more aggressive.

A week ago the powerful German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau sank a British aircraft carrier, two destroyers and two auxiliaries off the Norwegian coast. This is noteworthy; first, because both these German ships had [illegible] reported as sunk or badly damaged, and, second, because this action occurred far out in the North Sea, indicating that the British cordon around the German coast is no longer operating efficiently.

The German coast of course, is no longer what it was. The European shoreline under direct Nazi control now extends from Narvik, in northern Norway, to the mouth of the Seine, almost directly across the channel from the great English naval base at Portsmouth. A huge arc, dotted with harbors from which submarines and swift torpedo boats can strike at will, has been drawn around half of Great Britain's elongated coastline. The prospect of the blockader being blockaded is no longer fanciful.

Faced with this new and alarming situation, and recognizing the absolute necessity of guarding the lines of overseas communication, it seems unlikely that the British Admiralty will henceforth be able to detach many ships for service in the Mediterranean. It is more probable, indeed, that some now there may have to be called back for the defense of British shores. That was one reason for the evacuation of Narvik. And the urgency of the situation will not grow less if a large part of the German army in France is soon released to threaten an attack on England.

Gloomy forebodings as to the possibility of the British fleet being forced into a defensive position, in home waters, may not materialize. Certainly most Americans hope that this eventuality may not come to pass. And that hope, on the part of Americans, should be strengthened by a vital consideration which seems as yet to have escaped public attention.

It is generally recognized that our neutrality law is at present operating to favor the Allies. And it is very generally desired that this law may be increasingly interpreted so as to validate the President's declaration at Charlottesville. But whether "we will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this Nation," as Mr. Roosevelt promised on Monday night, depends to a large extent on who controls the seas.

The neutrality law, it must be remembered, is majestic in its impartiality. Any belligerent that can send ships to this country, and pay cash down, has an equal right to buy and take home all the war supplies we are willing to release.

American munitions are at present going to Great Britain and France solely because those nations still control the seas. If that control should be materially weakened; if fast German or Italian steamers should be able to slip through holes in the blockade, they would have every right, under existing law, to obtain here the "material resources" which, at Charlottesville, the President pledged to the Allied cause.

THIS CONTINGENCY was envisaged in Washington even before Italy entered the war. In a roundabout way the Sheppard-May bill, which passed the House on May 24 and received unanimous Senate approval on Tuesday of this week, will serve to meet the problem.

Tucked away in this measure is a provision that "whenever the President determines that it is necessary in the interest of national defense to prohibit or curtail the exportation of any military equipment or munitions . . . he may by proclamation prohibit or curtail such exportation except under such rules and regulations as he shall describe."

This means that if any Italian or German ships should run the Allied blockade and reach American ports they may still, regardless of the neutrality law, be prevented from taking home any military equipment "or machinery, tools or material necessary for the manufacture of servicing thereof."

The measure intentionally gives the President the discretionary power to divert exports of munitions from one side, and to the other, which is essential for implementing the line of policy laid down in his Charlottesville speech.

The entry of Italy into the war, and the much greater threat to Allied sea power involved therein, indicates that this section of the Sheppard-May bill was not at all superfluous. And it clearly demonstrates how the effort to impose a system of mandatory neutrality on the Administration is breaking down under the stress of circumstance.

White House Press Notes

By Mark Sullivan

Reporter's Impressions

THESE ARE A REPORTER'S notes made at President Roosevelt's press conference on the day following publication of the note Premier Reynaud of France sent him, one of the most poignant messages in history—not only poignant in the emotional sense but having meaning which goes to the very heart of the organized world.

We all went in, and stood before his desk, in irregular rows—each row about 20 men long, the group about 10 rows deep.

The President was seated, as usual; everything was as usual. The President opened the conference. This was about 50 per cent "as usual"—for about half the time he takes the initiative at his press conferences, and about half the time he waits for some newspaperman to ask a question. This time he said, matter-of-factly, that he had just signed the Army appropriation bill. Matter-of-factly, also, he said something about approving a bill having to do with sugar, an obscure bit of legislation, probably not of much interest to anybody in the room, except, perhaps, a correspondent of a Honolulu newspaper.

Then, again matter-of-factly, Mr. Roosevelt said he had set up a National Defense Research Committee, advisory to the Commission for National Defense. It is to consist of 8 scientists, and its function is to coordinate the work of all the research institutions in the country, government research bodies, those in private industry such as in General Electric, those in colleges. It will handle most of the research problems arising in our preparedness effort.

THAT WAS ALL the President volunteered. It bore no relation, obviously, to what was in everybody's mind. Yet the President's omission of any reference to Premier Reynaud's letter did not have the meaning that omissions sometimes have. One gathered that he realized that for the moment he could say nothing more than he had already said in his speech last Monday night about Italy; and could do nothing more than is already being done, by the shipment to the Allies of as much supplies as we can get together. One assumed Mr. Roosevelt would like to do more and say more. It was the sort of occasion which, if the circumstances permit, gives opportunity for ringing statement. But the circumstances did not, for the moment, permit dramatic statement or dramatic action. Yet there was in Mr. Roosevelt no sign of emotion repressed, or of impulse frustrated. It was as if he realized that for the moment nothing decisive or climatic could be done—and that was that. The result was to cast over the whole press conference an atmosphere of, so to speak, un-excitement.

After Mr. Roosevelt had contributed to the conference the slight matters he initiated himself, and time came for the newspapermen to ask questions, Mr. Fred Essary, of the Baltimore Sun, began. His question was the one in everybody's mind. Did Mr. Roosevelt contemplate a reply to Premier Reynaud's letter? Mr. Roosevelt answered that there was nothing to say except that everything is being done that possibly can be done. One was reasonably sure Mr. Roosevelt wanted to do more, and in due course will do more. But the time to speak of it was not yet.

A little later came another question—related, perhaps too closely, to what was in everybody's mind: "Do you believe, Mr. President, that America, by acting with as much speed and in as much volume as is possible for us, will be in time to save the Allies?" To that, of course, Mr. Roosevelt indicated by his manner that it was not quite a question that would be proper for him to answer.

THEN SOMEONE ASKED a question which stirred Mr. Roosevelt to a not too cryptic touch of sardonic humor. The question was about a rumor from Paris that our Ambassador there, Mr. William Bullitt, is being kept by the Germans "in protective custody." Mr. Roosevelt, undoubtedly feeling the rumor was not true, and showing skepticism by his manner, wondered—against what, and against whom, could there be need for protecting Mr. Bullitt.

Another story from Europe was brought up. An American newspaper correspondent in Germany had interviewed Hitler and had quoted the Fuehrer as saying that the idea he would ever attack the United States was "grotesque." Did Mr. Roosevelt have anything to say about that? He replied that he had not—except that "it brings up recollections." That Mr. Roosevelt thought, was a sufficient comment. He was asked whether that one sentence from his comment could be put in quotation marks, and he said it could. The "recollections" which were brought up to him, he did not enumerate. But everyone present, and probably every newspaper reader in America, has the recollections in his own mind—the somewhat long list of nations which Hitler has said he would never attack.

There were one or two other questions on topics remote from the war. About them, Mr. Roosevelt made brief comment. Then someone said, "Thank you very much, Mr. President," and the newspapermen went out.

Am I a good citizen or every inch a chiseler? . . . Or every other inch, then? . . . Am I capable of looking behind the flag for the main chance, thinking about a quick profit while holding my hat while the colors pass, or associating a bugle call with a chance to make a little money in band instruments? . . . Have I—and most Americans—been concentrating on de luxe travel, super comforts and the more abundant life so long that I wince at the prospect of more exercise, less food and a little hazard in living? . . . Come clean, conscience!

Do I honestly feel anything like the devotion to, and love of, the American system that the Germans feel for Hitler's ideals? . . . Am I as eager to risk my life for the Constitution and traditions of America as a Nazi is to risk his for the unspeakable Nazi system? . . . If not, why not? . . . Isn't the American system as high above the Nazi system as the morning star is above the barroom gas light? . . . Have I become too self-centered, too smug, too dumb to realize it?

Has there been so much easy money, soft living and hi-de-do in this country that I would rather be wrong than be recruited, and rather be exempted than be either? . . . Am I willing to fight for my country at all times or only after getting sore at something in the newsreels? . . . Am I a patriot or a flopperoo? . . . How much of the hypocrite is in me when I cheer the parade, applaud a patriotic address and write a letter to the editor urging a more valiant America? . . . Boy, get me another glass of ice water; it's hot in here!

Do I compromise with my connections, listen unopposingly while rats flay democracy, and hope that if war comes to America it will not come until the hot weather and baseball season is over? . . . Do I make any real effort to face the facts, appraise the crisis for myself and know the truth or do I put it off because it interferes with my golf, tennis, swimming pool activities or automobile trips?

Do I love America, or is it just a lukewarm, comfortable affection? . . . Am I certain of my soul, or do I look more like a buck private? . . . In the pinches do I stand ready to give all for the preservation of the good old U. S. A., or am I inclined to hide a lot in the horse collar? . . . Can I say with Nathan Hale, "I only regret that I have but one life to give for my country," or have I been fed so much cynical literature that I think it a sacrifice if I give one old sweater to the Red Cross? . . . Getting down to brass tacks, am I a patriot of the Bunker Hill type, or just a bunk type? . . . Waiter, more ice! It must be the humidity!

Soldier Fallen in 1940

"Father, I did not think to find
You, too, as comrade of the ground—
With twisted limbs, and tortured mind,
And lips that make no sound.

"This is one common grave, and here,
Embracing dust that once drew breath,
I know life forfeited is dear
To both of us—in death."

—Marguerite Janvrin Adams.

The Nation's tax framers are worried over the possible creation of "war millionaires" by a defense program. Stop fretting, boys; it's waste motion. Even with peace time taxes a man can't afford to be a millionaire any more. And, besides, there's no money in it.

Various public figures are now urging "all possible aid, short of war, to the Allies." What is "short of war?" If Jack and John are in a street fight, with John on top, and Sam rushes in and slips Jack a knife, is he giving all possible aid short of getting into the row, or is he right in it? Huh? We wanna know. We are always running into little fights of this sort.

"Two hundred thousand pairs of stockings are sold every day in New York," says an office philosopher, "yet golfers continue to make a terrible fuss over a hole in one."

Motto on the wall of a Stratford philosopher—"We grow too soon old and we grow too smart late."

Ten thousand doctors are in convention in New York this week. For the next five days you can observe the spectacle of doctor after doctor greeting doctor after doctor with, "I don't feel so good today; I wish I had some idea what's wrong with me."

Shouses Put on 'Have-Fun Carnival,' One of Gayest Events of the Season

Secretary Woodring Acts as 'Barker,' And Other Attractions Include Games, Taxi Dances, Supper and Mint Juleps

WITH A CABINET MEMBER among the "barkers," and distinguished Senators and Representatives taking part in the sideshows, the "Have Fun Carnival" last night at Wolf Trap Farm was one of the gayest events of the spring season.

Several hundred motored out to the Jouett Shouse farm near Vienna, Va. There, for a dollar, they got supper, a chance to dance with beautiful girls, mint juleps, a peep at half a dozen amusements, and a chance to try their luck at a dozen different games. Money went to the Women's Institute of Professional Relations, of which Mrs. Shouse is chairman.

The dance platform on the lawn, left over from last year's carnival, was again the center of attraction. Here 12 beautiful taxi dancers received a dime from each gentleman who wanted a spin around the floor. The dancers wore white dresses with green badges lettered in gold.

Organized by Mme. Edgar Prochnik, they included Mrs. William MacCracken, who entertained the group with mint juleps at her house before driving out to Wolf Trap; Mrs. Sidney Lee, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Miss Doris Becker and Miss Mary Selden Kennedy, of Warrenton; Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. Duke Shoop, Miss Zeva Fish, Miss Louise Stillwell, Miss Patsy Baker, Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, and Miss Joan Dodd, daughter of the hostess.

The taxi girls shared the platform with a group of square dancers, headed by figure-caller John Drier. The women wore long, full-skirted dresses, and so enthusiastic was the crowd with the performance that many of the spectators ended up by joining in.

Secretary of War Woodring "barked" through a microphone to advertise the wares of his pretty wife, who cut silhouettes. Mrs. Woodring had loads of customers—despite the fact that idly looking through a horoscope the other day she was warned "not to attempt anything financial or artistic after 5 p. m. on June 14."

Mrs. Woodring Cuts Silhouettes

Gay Japanese lanterns were strung over the lawn at Wolf Trap, which is high on a hill. A mint julep bar was set up, with Mr. Shouse and other white-coated gentlemen serving as bartenders.

A buffet supper, with burgoo, a kind of stew, boiling over an open fire in a big iron pot, was served under the direction of Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Robert Jackson and Mrs. Thurman Arnold. Cold hams, tossed green salad, and biscuits also contributed to the interest of the menu.

Those with a grudge against the world could take it out in a "screamorium-breakatorium," from from which the sound of breaking plates and cups issued forth. Mrs. Albert Warner was in charge of this attraction.

Monkeys Are Also Center of Interest

Mrs. Sidney Lee's monkeys were another center of interest. She borrowed the animals from a friend who has a menagerie and then went to the Zoo, where they loaned her a cage. Mrs. Lee also displayed a toucan, an unusual South American bird with a long beek.

Hoopla and a grab bag were under the aegis of Senator D. Worth Clark and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim. Tony Carnelli, of Warrenton, did charcoal portraits, and Cliff Berryman, jr., dashed off caricatures.

People wore whatever they felt like, and one saw sports frocks, seersucker suits, and long skirted summer evening dresses, all jumbled together.

Receiving congratulations on the celebration of their twenty-second wedding anniversary were Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg. Before coming out to Wolf Tray they had entertained six friends for dinner at the 1935 F street club. Among their guests were another pair of celebrants, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, who were married a year ago yesterday.

Achesons Entertain At Cocktail Party

Hosts at cocktails before the carnival were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Acheson, who are occupying Miss Frances Sortwell's quaint little house in Georgetown this summer. They entertained for the recently wed Theodore Dominicks.

Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Lowell Mellett, Dr. and Mrs. Stuart Britt, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, Luis Quintanilla, Counselor of the Mexican Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Scrivener, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Waldron Faulkner, Dr. and Mrs. John Latimer, Laughlin Currie, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Howry, Glen Anderson, Sam Katz, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Shenefield, Mrs. Morell Douville, of Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. Morton Bodfish, of Chicago; Edward Baltz, Gordon Tweedy, Jack Wilkins, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heard.

Also the Governor of the Virgin Islands and Mrs. Lawrence Cramer, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Fortas, Miss Ruth McNamy, Michael Dudley and Ashby Kaine, of Richmond.

Himes Plan Party Tonight, Defy Almanac

Two Engaged Couples To Be Honored Despite Forecast of Gales

For once, somebody who went by the Hagerstown Almanac in picking a day for a party is hoping that its predictions will be wrong. The almanac prophesies gales for today, but Canfield Himes, who has been disillusioned by weather reports, and his sister, Marilynn, are planning an outdoors affair at their home tonight. They decided, when picking the date, the weather is always the opposite of that indicated by the almanac.

Scene of the dance, which is to honor two young engaged couples, will be the garden of the home of the hosts' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes, near Frederick, Md. The party will center around the swimming pool, with supper to be served there at small tables later in the evening. Dancing will take place in the adjacent bathhouse, to the music of Sidney's Orchestra.

Guests of honor are Miss Jane Eustis and George Wheeler, who will be married June 29, and Miss Betty Fisher and Grant Boss, whose wedding is set tentatively for next autumn. Mr. Wheeler's mother, Mrs. Carlos Del Mar, has a place near the Himes estate, and her son and his fiance are week-ending there. About 16 of their friends are staying with them over the dance.

There'll be over 100 at the party, with the older generation represented by Mr. and Mrs. Himes. The wedding attendants of Miss Eustis and Mr. Wheeler will be present, and others include the Misses Zeva Fish, Louise Stillwell, Nancy Weller, Ellen Hewes Flowerree, Laura Blair, Billie Byrd West, Sita Finkenstaedt, and Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn.

About 40 of the guests will charter a big bus and drive up from Washington along with members of the orchestra.

Robinsons Back From West Point

Mrs. Wirt Robinson and her daughter, Miss Evelyn Byrd Robinson, returned yesterday to their apartment at the Shoreham from West Point, where they spent June Week as the guests of Col. and Mrs. W. E. Morrison.

Mrs. Robinson and Miss Robinson were present Monday morning when the superintendent of the Military Academy, Gen. Jay L. Benedict, dedicated a memorial to the late Col. Wirt Robinson.

Miss Robinson unveiled the memorial to her father, which was a personal tribute from alumni and friends of the United States Military Academy 11 years after the death of the man whom they described as "one of the most distinguished graduates of West Point."

Although Col. Robinson held the chair of electricity and chemistry at the Academy, he was a great lover of nature, and the memorial is in the form of a bird sanctuary set high on a hill between the two academy chapels.

Only the shrubs and trees were used in landscaping the sanctuary, and a little brook trickles over steps set with mineralogical and geological specimens which Col. Robinson had collected and donated to the academy library. Benches and walks will make it a romantic spot for June Weeks and academy dances.

The memorial was presented by Col. Roger Alexander in behalf of the alumni and friends who contributed for it, and the speech of acceptance was made by Gen. Benedict. Former Chaplain Clayton L. Wheat, who had been a close friend of Col. Robinson, said the dedicatory prayer.

Play Harder To Keep Young And Healthy

Make Backyard To Beat Old Age Recreation Ground

By Ida Jean Kain

GROWN-UPS don't play enough . . . that's why we get neuritis, neuralgia, neurosis and rheumatism! Due to sedentary work, joints get stiff and ligaments lose tone. We don't wear out, we rust out!

What I'm trying to do is to scare you into turning your backyard into a playyard. Probably your husband rides to work, sits at a desk all day and sits around all evening. Does he get any exercise . . . precious little! You do your housework, which is activity of a sort, but not the kind of exercise to keep you in good physical trim, to say nothing about your waistline. But if you would rig up a game or two in your backyard, the whole family could get fun and exercise out of it.

Ship Not Needed For Deck Tennis

There are all kinds of games, adaptable to both small and large backyards. How about playing deck tennis? It's fun, full of action and requires not too much space. Instead of a tennis ball, you use a rope quoit or a small rubber ring, which is tossed rapidly back and forth over the net, which should be 4 feet 9 inches from the ground. All you need is a space about 20 by 40 feet and level enough to provide even footing.

Badminton is a swell game, and anyone can play it. All you need is a little space for the equipment, which consists of a net and two rackets and a shuttlecock. Batting the shuttlecock back and forth across the net is the best stretching and twisting exercise you can find.

The same net can be used for volleyball. It's fun to toss a ball across the net, and its exhilarating exercise. Paddle tennis is another game to play with a net—this time stretched across a concrete driveway. For this game solid wooden paddles and a sponge rubber ball are used.

Plenty of Action At Shuffleboard

Another way to use a cement drive is for shuffleboard. The game is to shove wooden disks along with a long handled cue and get the disks in the high score marks and off the lines. The markings look somewhat like a game of hop-scotch. Shuffleboard doesn't sound like action, but wait until you try it.

Tether tennis, sometimes called pole tennis, is a heap of fun. All you need is a pole ten feet high to which is fastened an eight foot long rope to which is attached a ball. The object of the game is to whale the ball with a tennis racket, trying to wrap it around the pole, with the opponent attempting to prevent it from winding. It's an amusing game!

There is also horseshoes, croquet and archery.

Drop in at a sporting goods store and ask for inexpensive games to play right in your own backyard. They have all kinds. You won't lose any appreciable number of pounds with the games, because exercise is not reducing, but you can lose inches, get a lovelier figure, step up the circulation and feel like a new person!

WHAT happens to a screen star's film wardrobe is a question often asked by visitors to Hollywood sets. The answer is uniform with at least one of the stars, Bette Davis, who invariably has streamlinings of historic costumes made up for her personal wardrobe—one reason for her reputation as a fashion leader on the West Coast.

Marshall Adams

Bette's newest characterization of the little French governess in Rachel Fields' novel, turned movie, "All This and Heaven Too," gives her the opportunity of playing prophet to early fall fashions. The role of governess (in none too affluent circumstances but with quiet good tatste and distinction in clothes) reflects the approaching tendency of more reserved fashions for wear this fall

Two of the period gowns are shown above. Look closely at the modern version for late summer wear—exact save for foreshortened skirt and sleeves. Even the nineteenth century frivolity, the parasol, was appropriated by the film star, although we don't suggest this flippant touch for timid women who would borrow styles from the past. The dress itself is worth noticing, however, for it combines a salient feature of things to come—a narrow little waistline.

Parasols Are Back In New Designs And Gay Fabrics

New York (AP).—Parasols are coming back with summer fashions in the greatest numbers since the Nineties, style scouts report.

In Manhattan's largest shops they are hailed as "tremendous news" and are being shown in gayer designs and fabrics than the Nineties ever knew.

What's behind the parasol parade nobody seems to know. Some lay it to the influence of Queen Elizabeth's American visit last summer. Others say it's just part of the general trend. In any case, parasols are being shown in new fabrics and designs, to be carried with everything from raincoats to afternoon frocks.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Lasses From Texas Keep on Stealing New York Spotlight

New York, June 14.

TELL ME, pretty maiden, are there any more ripsnorting young beauties in the State of Texas? If there are, it is some sort of minor miracle, for the lasses of the Lone Star Empire keep stealing the spotlight here and in Hollywood, and it is time we others of the 47 remaining States took a good running jump at Texas. My gosh, do those charming people want it all?

ALICE HUGHES

Hall and I have worked a lot of other places and he still doesn't know where the prime peaches are—he says good words for the belles of this town, Washington, Chicago and Des Moines. But he has never worked in Texas, which keeps pourin' it on. Now I won't let the poor creature even visit the State. He might settle there.

Now comes a fetching young creature named Dimple Causey, who is Miss Houston when visiting our fair. Dimple says she likes our place because she feels so "hongry" when she rears up of a morning. But shucks, there's no place like Texas. "I love it with all mah heart," is her verdict. But she'd better be careful. If she and her mamma are humbugged into going to the Stork Club some night, ten Hollywood talent scouts will dive at her with contracts and fountain pens. For Dimple is young and appetizingly pretty—and she's from Texas. Sure-fire combo. Say, when are the rest of us States going to make a counter-attack?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—With the nation alive to the need for refugee aid in the warring nations, Dorothy Swenson, a brilliant store executive here, has come up with what seems an excellent idea for widespread help. She would design and make a special refugee kit. She suggests a small one, easy to carry, standardized, and containing some concentrated food tablets, bouillon cubes, small dressings, cleansing tissues, some lubricant, safety pins and a few other small necessities. Worth doing, it seems to me.

Diabetes Hits Older People More Mildly

Disease Is Inability Of Body to Utilize Sugars and Starches

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

There are two types of diabetes and although essentially the same, when you meet them in practice they hardly seem to be the same disease. In general, one occurs in children and one in middle-aged people. The children get all the worst of it because almost invariably they have a severe type of diabetes.

Diabetes is an inability on the part of the body to use starches and sugars and it is, as of course is well known, due to a degeneration of certain cells in the pancreas which furnish the body substance called insulin, which imitates the way the body disposes of sugars and starches.

The severe cases require insulin and children nearly always have to take it. It must be given hypodermically and it is surprising to see how quickly children learn to give themselves these doses. I know a youngster of 10 who has been taking insulin for a year, prepares it herself and gives it to herself like a little soldier without fussing or complaining.

But diet must also be arranged for children. The tendency nowadays is to give high carbohydrate (sugar and starch) rather than high fat diet as was done formerly. Diabetic children should be educated as to what they can eat and this also they learn very rapidly.

We must also provide in the diet for growth and as years go on, the amount of all food substances in the diet rises. At the age of 5, a child may take 140 grams of carbohydrate, 60 grams of protein and 70 grams of fat, whereas at the age of 17, this rises to 250 grams of carbohydrate, 115 grams of protein and 115 grams of fat. The growing child also needs plenty of calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D, and certainly a good deal of vitamin A, the growing vitamin.

A typical menu for one day for a child aged about 7 or 8 years, which contains 160 grams of carbohydrate, 68 grams of protein and 78 grams of fat, is as follows:

Breakfast

Orange juice—80 c. c., 1/3 cup; rolled oats, cooked—80 Gm., 1/3 cup; sugar—5 Gm., 1 teaspoonful; milk—300 c. c., 10 ounces; egg—60 Gm., 1 egg; bacon—8 Gm., 1 small slice; bread (toasted)—30 Gm., 1 slice; butter—3 Gm., 1 thin square.

Luncheon

Vegetable soup—1 cup; soda cracker—3 crackers, 2" square; bread—15 Gm., ½ slice; butter—12 Gm., 1 sq. ½" thick; tomato juice—120 c. c., ½ cup; beef—33 Gm., slice 4"x2"x½"; milk—200 c. c.; baked apple—100 Gm., 1 small apple; cream—25 Gm., 2 tablespoonfuls; sugar—5 Gm., 1 teaspoonful.

Dinner

Carrots—100 Gm., ½ cup; potato—80 Gm. (size of egg); string beans—100 Gm., ½ cup; chicken, broiled—30 Gm. of meat; bread—30 Gm., 1 slice; butter—12 Gm., 1 sq. ½" thick; milk—300 Gm., 10 ounces.

Part of milk may be used in cooked vegetables.

Milk Again Comes to Fore As Beautifier

Scientists Rediscover Home Preparations And Cast-Off Aids

By Carolyn Abbott.

OFTEN IN their search for facial beauty, women overlook the simple, home preparations that gave their great-great grandmothers a peach bloom skin. Ten years ago the young sophisticate thought of nothing but expensive creams in fancy jars. Then through a cycle of experiments, the scientists and cosmeticians rediscover and stamp their approval of the cast off beauty aids. Milk is one beautifier that comes in this category.

As an effective beauty aid, milk is not new but the "know alls" passed it over for many years. Roman maidens brought out their "oomph" by soaking bread in milk and applied it as a facial. In the days before lotions were manufactured extensively, buttermilk was highly regarded as a complexion aid. Ancient Egyptian beauties reputedly bathed in asses milk.

Milk for Nightcap

Realizing that beauty is more than skin deep, actresses, professional models and debutantes rely upon milk as their chief beauty aid. They are among the most confirmed and enthusiastic milk drinkers. Discarding its merits as a health giver, they maintain that as a beauty aid alone it gets their unconditional endorsement.

Ginger Rogers drinks milk for her night cap. Irene Dunne reports that it soothes her throat, and always takes a glass before singing. Anne Shirley says milk drinking is one of her regular habits.

Ice cream sodas combined with milk is Virginia Bruce's favorite and Joan Crawford goes in for chocolate milk. Greta Garbo is in the buttermilk brigade, and Claudette Colbert's afternoon pick-me-up is a tall glass of fresh milk.

Also Used Externally

By experience, all these as well as countless others, know that a quart of milk in the daily diet tones up the system and imparts an outward glow to the skin that no cosmetic duplicates permanently.

Not only is milk advised for the daily diet to increase the vitality and glow of a radiant skin, but is used externally in many of the newest cosmetics and soaps. One local store makes its own buttermilk soap in a variety of colors—blue, white, green, orchid, is having a special sale on this product for the next few days. Many cold creams now on the market have a milk curd base. Also, there is a famous pasteurized milk preparation now on the market that is excellent for softening and toning the skin. In creams, in the bottled (undiluted) and in every conceivable form, milk ranks high as a beauty aid today. And so great-great grandmothers' glamour ritual becomes that of all would-be current beauties.

Bathroom Technique

With golden days of outdoor activity, the tubs and showers are doing double duty. The best way to keep a bathroom looking neat and slick is to train the family to keep the towels folded evenly on the racks. That may be a hard habit to establish but it's worth being hard-boiled about. Even a clean bathroom looks messy with towels askew.

Baroque Designs

Baroque, long under a decorative cloud, has emerged again to inspire many designs that are almost modern in their over-scale sweep, their dominant irregular scrolls, their heavy sculptural quality. Baroque describes the spectacular, often fantastic, style that characterizes the ornament of the time of Louis XIV.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man's 'Best Girl,' Whom He Has Known Since She Was 'Kid of 13,' Writes Him That She Is Engaged; He Was Just on Verge of Proposing; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I need some advice. My best girl friend seems to be forgetting me. She writes that she is engaged to another man. I met her about eight years ago, when she was a kid of 13. I am a Virginian and she comes of a middle-class New York family. She has worked her way up in life, and from the time we met, she has always respected my judgment and we have kept up a steady correspondence, although we hadn't seen each other in seven years, until my vacation last summer. But in the meantime, I had learned to care a lot for her.

On meeting again last summer, we talked, laughed and had as much in common as if it had been only a couple of weeks that we had been apart. We talked of marriage, home, children, better jobs for ourselves, etc., and she stated (or, rather, promised me) that she wouldn't get married for years yet. She said she wanted to see something of the world before she settled down . . .

Since then, I have worked practically day and night to save money and advance myself, and was planning to go to see her in another two weeks to ask her to marry me (because by then I would be able to give her a ring). Tied down by my job, it wasn't possible for me to see her very often. I just don't know what to do now—for she writes that she is going to be married and can't correspond with me any more.

I am heartbroken. I have loved and trusted her so much that I haven't been dating any other girls, feeling that I owed her complete loyalty and devotion. Since receiving her letter, I have thought of writing and telling her how things are with me. I have also thought of going to see her and trying to win her affections again, before it is too late to discuss the matter. I will be grateful for immediate suggestions, as it is urgent that I do what I can right away. Yours sincerely,
JONATHAN T.

Fight to a Finish To Win Her Hand

DEAR JONATHAN T.: Write the girl immediately that you are flabbergasted by her statement that she is going to be married; that you had thought it was understood she was going to marry you; that you have been working day and night since you saw her last summer, trying to get Fortune by the tail so that you would have something special to offer her, along with your heart and hand; AND that she simply must see you and talk things over. Tell her you will be in New York on such-and-such a date; which is to say, as soon as you can make arrangements to be there.

If she demurs about your coming, override her objections. Get there anyway and storm her heart with every argument and exhortation at your command. Remember, "Faint heart ne'er won fair lady." And, also, that, "All's fair in love and war."

Your eight years' curiously close mental companionship, sustained almost entirely by correspondence, cannot be lightly dismissed. Beyond all question, you two "have something there," as the saying goes. Your basic kinship was proved by the ease with which you met as adults, last summer, after having parted as children, and spontaneously talked and laughed and planned for the future, on the implicit understanding (at the time) that you would be together in the years to come.

Maybe the girl has been beguiled by a newcomer's blitzkrieg courtship; but the explanation could be that, after saying good-bye to you last summer, she was more restless, more attuned to love's coming, than she had been in preceding years. Maybe you have been too close-mouthed about your matrimonial intentions and "the way things are" with you.

Had you read into the record—particularly after last summer's meeting—just how much she means to you, and what you proposed doing about it, this threat-on-the-horizon might never have developed. It was rather stupid of you to expect her to read your mind. She may have thought you were carelessly complacent—a supposition which would tend to make her doubly appreciative of and susceptible to the addresses of a more ardently articulate admirer.

You may learn, of course, that she has fallen in love, unexpectedly and completely, with a chap who is, essentially, the better man (at least, for her). But you would be a fool to slump down in heart-broken silence on any such assumption—when there is ample time left to retrieve your lost ground, if there is a chance of retrieving it. Engagements, as I have said here many times before, are not binding agreements. They are but tentative options. And you should make it clear to this girl that you must be reckoned with as a never-say-die suitor up to the very hour of her marriage—which you are determined shall be to you.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Cream Pie a Tribute to National Dairy Month

CHOCOLATE Cream Pie is an easy-to-make dessert and delightful to serve. Since this is National Dairy Month I know of no better way to observe it than by making a chocolate cream pie. The following recipe is one that Ann Sullivan Hagen, Home Economist, Chestnut Farm, Chevy Chase Dairy, gave me. You will find it an excellent recipe to follow.

Chocolate Cream Pie

Heat 3 cups milk and 4 squares chocolate in a double boiler. When the chocolate is melted beat until mixture is smooth. Combine ½ cup flour, 1¼ cups sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 3 slightly beaten eggs. Add a little of the milk and chocolate mixture, mix well and return to the double boiler. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Stir in 3 tablespoons butter and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Cool slightly and pour into a baked pie shell. When ready to serve whip 1 cup whipping cream, add ¼ teaspoon vanilla and ¼ cup confectioner's sugar and spread over top of pie. This recipe makes a 9-inch pie.

Materials Tagged To Show If They Will Fade in Sun

New York (AP).—Have you been worried by clothes that fade?

Have you bought cottons and linens vaguely labeled fast, then found that they ran in suds and paled in the sun?

Have you complained about them, only to be told that nothing could be done?

Then here's news.

Now there are cotton and linen clothes on the market that are tagged to show just how they can be washed and how much light they can stand without fading. They are the first to be labeled according to new standards of color fastness, approved this year by the National Association of Finishers of Textile Fabrics and submitted to the Bureau of Standards with the endorsement of a score of important testing laboratories.

Fabric finishers form the branch of the textile fabric manufacturing business which dyes or prints the woven "gray goods" and finishes them to prevent creasing, spotting, etc.

Use of the tags has been launched by one mill which claims to be the largest finisher of fabrics in the world. Five million garments so labeled are to be on the market by fall.

Method of Dyeing

Batik is a process of dyeing cloth by applying a protective wax to a given pattern, then dipping the whole piece in the dye which thus does not penetrate the waxed part. The wax is then boiled out, leaving the undyed part for the design. This procedure is repeated for each color in the pattern. Thank the Javanese for this idea.

Mead Urges Credit for Small Business

Senator Favors Liberalizing Federal Reserve Policies

Senator James Mead (Democrat), of New York, yesterday urged a liberalizing of the Federal Reserve System to permit increased extension of credit to small business at an institute of the American Association of Independent Small Business in Commerce Department auditorium.

"We shall be making a sad mistake if we do not recognize the dilemma of the small businessman and offer him tangible assistance" by permitting money advances on a broader basis, he said.

Aiken Assails New Deal

Mead said there is a "no man's land where small business is unable to find assistance" and added: "Congress must assume earnest responsibility in providing for the well-being of certain branches of our industrial system which have been surviving with great difficulty for years."

At a banquet at the Willard Hotel last night, Gov. George D. Aiken, of Vermont, declared Administration "regimentation" of American industry is "breaking the backs of little business today."

Without the stimulus of war, this country's "industry, large and small, would be in a state of almost complete collapse," the Vermont Governor declared.

Politicians Rewarded, He Says

Business "controls are not administered today by men who know the first practical principles of business but by those who have been elevated to dominating positions as a reward for political activities or bright ideas," he said.

Referring to the present national emergency, Gov. Aiken urged that Congress remain in session beyond the June 22 adjournment date and urged that "the counsel of American businessmen be sought and accepted" in decision relating to the European war.

Finland Refuses American Offer To Postpone Debt

By the United Press

The Finnish Legation announced last night that Finland will pay its regular war debt installment today, despite the fact that Congress whipped through a concurrent resolution yesterday authorizing the republic to postpone both the June and December payments.

Because Finland is the only World War debtor which has kept abreast of its payments, and now is hard-pressed financially, due to the Russian invasion, both houses, at the instigation of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, passed the resolution yesterday.

Finnish officials were extremely gratified by the gesture, but said they were determined to meet their $159,398 obligation "as a matter of principle."

$8,000 Contributed In a Day; Agency Needs $57,604

Contributions of more than $8,000 yesterday brought the drive of the District Red Cross war relief fund to the $242,398 mark as officials laid final plans for a "goal-to-go" meeting tomorrow night, an effort to shoot the campaign past its $300,000 quota.

Before a capacity audience, including Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, National Chairman Norman H. Davis, Bruce Baird, local war relief fund director, and a number of radio performers will join in pleas for quick realization of the drive objective at 8 p. m. in Labor Department Auditorium.

Meanwhile, the first Red Cross "mercy ship," the S. S. McKeesport, will sail from New York some time today for Bordeaux.

Carries $1,000,000 Cargo

The ship, on whose sides large Red Cross emblems have been painted, will carry a $1,000,000 cargo of food, medical supplies, and hospital trucks to be distributed to various refugee centers in southern France.

Heightened importance of the sailing was a report from Richard Allen, Red Cross representative in southern France, describing serious epidemics among millions of refugees in that area.

Among gifts to the District chapter yesterday was $500 from the National Savings & Trust Co., the first bank in the country to contribute under the amendment to the National Banking Act, signed during the week, and a draft for $126 from T. Nelson Johnson, Ambassador to China, the latter sum representing collections from the staff at Chung-King, provisional Chinese capital.

Treasury Big Contributor

From the Treasury Department came a check for $1,075, bringing the total contribution from that department to $18,054.

Other gifts received yesterday included:

Mrs. J. Ellerton Lodge, $200; Mrs. Marshall Langhorn, $200; Miss Alice T. Shong, $100; Miss Marguerite C. Hunt, $200; Anonymous, $1,000; Col. and Mrs. A. C. Davidson, $500; Times Herald employes, $104; Corrin Strong, $1,000; Washington Gas Light Co., $500; Washington Gas Light Co. employes, $1,000; The Washington Post employes, $93; C. & P. Telephone Co. employes, $154.50.

In the Government unit the following fifts, in addition to that of the Treasury Department, were received:

D. C. Electric Department, $35.50; Smithsonian Institution, $71; Walter Reed Hospital, $57.75; Federal Works Agency, $516.15.

Turks Cheer Allies But Shy at War

Istanbul, June 14 (AP).—The Grand Council of the Republican Peoples Party—virtually the governing body of Turkey—cheered the Allied cause today but the government continued to make it clear it does not plan to enter the war at this time.

An ovation on behalf of the British and French came after debate in which Premier Refik Saydam and Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu told the grand council that Turkey was unswerving in her foreign policy.

Axis May Get French Fleet, Experts Fear

Senator Norris Predicts Nazis Would Force Surrender for Peace

By the Associated Press

Swift developments of the European war suggested to naval men yesterday the possibility that the Berlin-Rome alliance might be able directly to challenge Great Britain's sea power by gaining possession of the French fleet.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, expressed belief that if the French armies capitulated to the Germans, the Nazis might make surrender of the French fleet a part of the peace terms.

Combined, German, Italian and French warships would outnumber the British navy in battleships and in categories other than aircraft carriers and cruisers.

The coalition would be stronger than the United States fleet in similar respects.

French Fleet World's Fourth

A future coalition against the United States has been suggested to Congress as a possibility by naval men repeatedly in recent years, though the French fleet did not figure in the calculations as a possible foe.

The French fleet is rated as the world's fourth, trailing only Britain, the United States and Japan.

Official American naval data, revised to May 1, afford a broad statistical gauge of the relative power of a German-Italian-French seapower combination, even though the figures are out of date because of day-by-day war losses and the completion of vessels under construction.

Tonnage Compared

In total tonnage of warships actually in service at that time, Britain had 1,581,294 to an aggregate of 1,341,781 for the suggested coalition.

By types of ships Britain was credited with 14 battleships following the loss of the Royal Oak, to 19 for the suggested coalition. On the other side of the ledger, Britain has six aircraft carriers since the acknowledged loss of two, compared with only two for France and none for Germany or Italy actually in service. As of May 1, the British navy listed 65 cruisers of all types of a combined total of 45 by the other three sea forces.

However, even though the British Admiralty has claimed the destruction of most of the 70 U-boats with which Germany started the war, the combination would have an overwhelming margin in submarines. Italy alone has 72 to 56 for Britain.

Maj. George Fielding Eliot was reported to have suggested to the Senate Naval Affairs Committee today that before the European war ends the American people may be faced with the question whether they should open United States naval bases for use by the British fleet.

There has been speculation in some quarters that, if England were successfully invaded, the British fleet might continue the fight from bases in Canada. Canadian facilities, however, are meager in comparison with what would be needed.

Air Motor Plant Capable of 1,000 Weekly Is Opened

Paterson, N. J., June 14 (AP).—A huge new unit at the Wright Aeronautical Corporation plant, which will be capable of turning out 1,000 airplane motors weekly, was dedicated today.

Guy W. Vaughan, company president, referred to the peak capacity and the record 57-day plant construction with the assertion:

"Another such type building can be erected in case this country needs it for defense purposes."

A dozen Army planes droned overhead during the exercises, which were combined with a Flag Day celebration. The spectators watched a parade of 1,000 men, most of them Wright employes, two tanks and the entire motorized equipment of the New Jersey National Guard's 165th Field Artillery. Army, Navy and Marine officers inspected the plant afterwards.

The series of connected buildings add 540,000 square feet of floor space to facilities. Each unit was put in operation as soon as completed and is practically all in use now.

Bill Frees Milk Group Of D. C. Tax

Amendment Backed By Tydings Appears Headed for Trouble On Senate Floor

An amendment to the District unemployment compensation bill now before the Senate appeared headed for trouble yesterday as District officials disclosed that it would exempt the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association from payment of the local income tax.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, said that the amendment, sponsored by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, would be reexamined in the light of the disclosure. He indicated he might oppose it on the floor when the bill is called up on the consent calendar next week.

The amendment was attached to the House bill last week after Senator Tydings explained that it exempted farm cooperatives from the District income tax on the same basis that they are exempted from the Federal income tax.

Dirksen to Stand Fast

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, father of the local income tax law, who will be one of the conferees on the McGehee bill, said he would fight it to the last ditch in conference.

"The whole trend today is to narrow rather than to expand the groups that are exempt from taxes, local or national," he said, "and I see no reason why the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association should be granted any special privilege."

Similar amendments, it was recalled, were offered to the income tax bill, but were eliminated in conference.

Appeal Is Pending

The dairy cooperative, which now maintains its headquarters in Silver Spring, Md., sells more than 80 per cent of the milk consumed in Washington. It has resisted District officials said, the intangible tax, the business privilege tax and the income levy.

An appeal from a decision of Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the Board of Tax Appeals, holding the association owes the District an additional $16,170.86 in business privilege taxes is pending in the United States Court of Appeals for the District.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chief critic of the association during the milk investigation a year ago, said he was "surprised that the association would think of evading this just tax in view of the fact that Washington people pay the highest price for milk of any city in the United States."

Joy Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education Association, advised 13 graduates and 10 recipients of postgraduate certificates of the Woodward School to "work out your own problems" at commencement exercises of the school held at the Y. M. C. A. last night.

Urging the youth to "take charge of your own life," the speaker at the same time pointed out that "one of the best things for youth to do is to form friendships with older people."

Youth today has many more assets than its "pioneering forefathers," he said. "But few of us use as much energy as we have."

James J. King, headmaster of the school, and Alfred H. Lawson, president of the Y. M. C. A., presented diplomas to the graduates. Page McK. Etchison gave the invocation.

Youth Group Urges Reforms for D.C. After 'Trial' Here

Youth put the District government on trial last night, and found it guilty on a dozen counts which can only be vindicated by a life-sentence of suffrage, according to a jury of 12 young people. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was a guest at the Washington Youth Council's dinner meeting at the Y. W. C. A., which concluded American Youth Act week.

Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C. I. O., presented youth's charge that the District government is negligent of the needs of its young people, before the presiding judge, John P. Davis, executive secretary of the National Negro Congress.

As summed up by Howard Ennis, chairman of the body, the jury recommended: adequate vocational training; adequate vocational guidance; student guides in high schools and colleges; a Washington City college; a health program directed toward the needs of younger people; a revamped housing system; recreation facilities for all the people of the city, and "not on the present discriminatory basis," are a reconsideration of the relief set-up as it affects youth.

"These faults can only be mended when the people have a right to vote," declared Ennis.

Senator James E. Murray (Democrat), of Montana, said in a brief address that "aid for youth should be the United States' No. 1 line of defense . . . There is no doubt about the youth problem in this country."

He declared further that "unless we have patriotic, sound citizenship back of a country, that Nation can not continue."

Capital News in Brief

He'll Eat Off Mantel

A night watchman's lot is a dangerous one—especially when the chairs aren't bullet-proof. So discovered Nathaniel Taylor, 42, of 42 Pierce street northwest, who went to Emergency Hospital yesterday after a mishap at the National Laundry, 21 Pierce street northwest, where he is a watchman.

Taylor was seated in his office chair when his pistol dropped from a nearby table and was fired, he told police. The bullet passed through the seat of the chair which, like Taylor, was not bullet-proof. Emergency Hospital attendants said his condition was not serious.

20 Doctors Deny Trust Act Violation

Noted Physicians And 4 Associations Charged With Trade Restraint

Twenty physicians and four associations linked to "organized medicine" pleaded not guilty in the District Court yesterday to charges of conspiracy to restrain trade in violation of the antitrust laws. They will probably be tried this fall.

The Supreme Court last Monday refused to interfere with the prosecution which arraigned some of the Nation's most noted doctors for their campaign against Group Health Association, Inc., of Washington.

The physicians were released on their personal bonds by Justice James M. Proctor, who quashed the indictment against them last July because he found that medicine was not a "trade" such as is protected against restraint by the antitrust laws. The United States Court of Appeals, however, did not concur, and the defendants were ordered to stand trial.

The 1938 grand jury charged that medical groups and individual members conspired among themselves and with hospitals here to intimidate physicians who worked for G. H. A. and to deny the organization's staff access to hospital facilities.

Dr. Olin West, secretary and general manager of the American Medical Association, pleaded not guilty for his organization. Dr. John Ogle Warfield, jr., pleaded not guilty for the Washington Academy of Surgery. Dr. John H. Lyons pleaded not guilty for the District Medical Society. Dr. Hugh C. Welsh, Houston, Tex., pleaded not guilty for the Harris County (Tex.) Medical Society, of which he is secretary.

Individual defendants who pleaded not guilty were Drs. West, Warfield, Morris Fishbein, editor of the A. M. A. Journal; William Creighton Woodward, director of the A. M. A. Bureau of Legal Medicine; William Dick Cutter, secretary of the A. M. A. Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, and Roscoe Genung Leland, director of the A. M. A. Bureau of Medical Economics.

Other individual defendants, all from Washington, who pleaded not guilty, were Drs. Joseph Rogers Young, Prentiss Wilson, Arthur Carlisle Christie, Coursen Baxter Conklin, James Bayard Gregg Custis, Robert Arthur Hooe, Leon Alphonse Martel, Thomas Ernest Mattingly, Francis Xavier McGovern, Thomas Edwin Neill, Edward Hiram Reede, Wallace Mason Yater, William Mercer Sprigg and William Joseph Stanton.

One other defendant, Dr. Thomas Allen Groover, has since died.

On "closed minds" Representative Secrest (Democrat), of Ohio, placed the blame for many of this country's present problems at commencement exercises of the Washington College of Law, held last night at Memorial Constitutional Hall.

Two Bandits Rob Cairo Hotel, Escape in Chase

Two bandits who held up the night clerk at the Cairo Hotel yesterday and escaped with $50 into Virginia after a breakneck chase through downtown streets still were at large last night.

Victim of the robbery was John W. Dixon, 23, who told police the men entered the lobby about 3:30 a. m., asked for "Virginia Smith" and pulled a revolver when told the name did not appear on the register.

Dixon said he handed the men a money box when he became convinced the holdup "wasn't a joke."

ADA Seeks To Extend Borrowings

Slum Clearance Group Asks D. C. For Right to Get Loans Privately

Amendments designed to broaden and clarify the powers of the Alley Dwelling Authority were submitted to the Senate and House District committees yesterday in the form of a proposed bill.

One of the amendments would clarify the authority of the ADA to borrow funds from private sources, while another would enable the agency to extend its jurisdiction to slum areas that do not have inhabited alleys. The amendments have been approved by the Budget Bureau.

"The proposed amendments have two principal purposes," the Budget Bureau said in its letter of transmittal:

1. Assure the intent of Congress as expressed in the act that the Authority is fully empowered to borrow money from private as well as public sources, pledging as security its own properties and income . . .

2. Clarify and make more effective the general powers given the Authority by previous legislation to deal with slum areas which do not happen to contain inhabited alleys.

"During the years since the inhabited alleys first became recognized as focal points of disease, crime and vice, their influence has spread across the boundary streets to other squares," the letter added.

Put Navy Needs Above Civilian Pilot Training, Towers Urges

Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy, last night warned against an expansion of the pilot-training program of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to a point where it would hamper naval and military flying.

Speaking at a dinner of the new Flying Club of National University at University Club, the Navy air chief declared he was in favor of the civilian training program but declared:

"The Army and Navy must have first priority . . . the training (of civil and amateur fliers) must be done after we have what we need."

He explained after the meeting that in the present national emergency the Navy and Army would be seriously interfered with if they found competent aviation instructors as well as vitally needed airplanes unavailable for the defense aviation program, because of their use in civilian flight training.

Declaring "what we, what I'm trying to do is develop military and naval aviation," Towers said the defense forces had need "of all the planes, pilots and instructors" obtainable.

He referred to the temptation offered Navy and Army reserve fliers to remain with civil and commercial flying groups because of higher salaries in the latter.

Emphasizing the importance of a "tremendous building up" of the Nation's flying arm, the naval aeronautics chief warned, "it is easy to pass appropriation bills . . . but there is a great lapse between that and the realization of the thought."

Lieut. Col. G. deF. Larner, World War ace, and general manager of the National Aeronautic Association, presented an N. A. A charter to Palmer G. Scarnecchia, president of the club.

Baptist Home To Celebrate Its 25th Year

The District Baptist Home for Children, Bethesda, Md., the founding of which was inspired by a one-dollar gift, will mark a quarter of century service to little ones on Tuesday.

A luncheon then at Barker Hall, the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, and an anniversary tea on Saturday at the institution on Cedar Lane will be among the high spots of the celebration, in which past presidents, trustees, charter members and hundreds of other friends will participate.

A sketch depicting the colorful and inspiring history of the organization, will be presented at the Tuesday function by the board ladies under the direction of Mrs. Daniel C. Shankle. Vinton Koons will be narrator, and the Rev. Robert C. Savage, assistant pastor of Metropolitan Baptist Church, soloist.

Transportation Arranged

On the same program, E. Hilton Jackson, president of the Home's board of trustees, will review its financial history; Mrs. Howard S. Rappleye will present a "Who's Who" feature, and Prof. William A. Wilbur, one of the first trustees, will offer the invocation.

Also participating will be Mrs. Milton H. Prosperi, home's treasurer, and C. Clinton James, trustee, both of whom have been with the organization since its beginning. Mrs. E. Hilton Jackson, president of the Ladies' Board, will be toastmistress, and Mrs. James L. Fort, luncheon chairman.

Transportation to the tea on Saturday afternoon will be provided from the bus stop at Cedar Lane. The orchestra from the Vaughn Bible Class of Calvary Baptist Church will offer music. Mrs. Redman Mayo will handle arrangements for the affair.

To the late Dr. H. W. O. Millington belongs much of the credit for the home's establishment, as in November 1914, he presented a resolution to the District of Columbia Association of Baptist Churches, stressing the need of such a project.

Enthusiastic Response

At the close of the session a one dollar gift was presented to Dr. Millington, and, in a wave of enthusiasm, the audience pledged more than $2,500. On the following day, John B. Lord, of the Brookland Baptist Church, gave the Association his Brookland home, which was subsequently renovated and enlarged into a 21-room home for the youngsters.

When those quarters became inadequate, the board of trustees bought a large farm in Bethesda. Shortly afterward the late Edwin Gould offered to finance an $80,000 girls' dormitory, provided the Baptists erected a similar boys' cottage. That arrangement was reached.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, then First Lady, spoke at the dedication service on November 15, 1931. There are today 53 children in the home. E. Hilton Jackson a few days ago expressed the hope that a third dormitory, "Millington Hall" will become a not too far distant reality.

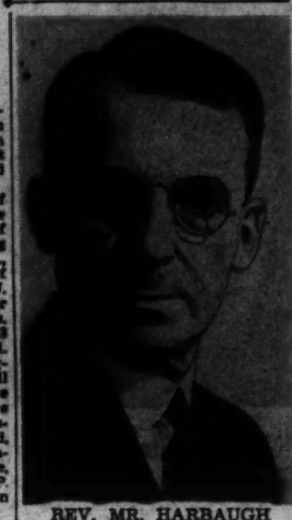
Church of the Week

Wilson Boulevard Disciples Of Christ to Mark 25th Year

Noted Clergymen To Make Addresses At Rites Tomorrow



REV. MR. HARBAUGH

The twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the founding of Wilson Boulevard Chrtisian Church, Wilson boulevard and North Piedmont street, Arlington, Va., will be held tomorrow.

The Rev. William M. Norment, of Hagerstown, Md., president of the Capital Area Missionary Society of the Disciples of Christ, will bring the principal address at 10:30 a. m., with the Rev. Earl Taggert, of Washington, and the Rev. E. J. Goode, of Winchester Va., former pastors, taking part in the exercises.

At the fellowship service from 3 to 4:30 p. m., the Rev. William M. Lockett, jr., president of the Arlington County Ministerial Union, will speak for the county churches. The Rev. Charles N. Williams, executive secretary of the Capital Area Missionary Society; Henry Brewood, president of the Capital Area Convention; the Rev. Ralph W. Frame, of Alexandria, and the Rev. Ira P. Harbaugh, for 16 years Wilson Boulevard pastor, also will speak.

In charge of arrangements for tomorrow's program are the Rev. Mr. Harbaugh, Mrs. Myrtle McShea, Mrs. Elizabeth Dey, Vernon B. Vaden, Mrs. Irene Orndorff, Mrs. Onie R. Howell and Paul C. Orndorff. A silver tea is slated for 4:30 p. m.

Mrs. Dey, Mrs. Genevieve Arnold Hartung and Mrs. McShea are the only charter members now active in the congregation, which was organized in July of 1915, the outgrowth of a series of evangelistic meetings in that area.

Since the Rev. Mr. Harbaugh took charge in 1924, the congregation has forged consistently ahead, and today has a church membership of more than 300 and a Sunday School enrollment of 260.

The clergyman, in addition to his regular duties, serves as temporary general superintendent of the Sunday School and teaches the Young Married Couples Class. Robert Gibbs teaches the latter group. Harold Harbaugh, the pastor's son, teaches the Young Men's Class.

The Rev. Mr. Harbaugh yesterday expressed deep regret at the death on May 11 of S. F. Shrout, sr., for 16 years teacher of the Women's Class. "He was one of the most capable men I had in many ways," he said. Mrs. Albert Williams now teaches that organization, while Mrs. C. P. Campbell is president.

S. F. Shrout, jr., son of the late class teacher, serves as official board chairman.

Wilson Boulevard Church, while not formally organized until July, 1915, had its inception two years earlier at worship services in the homes of Mrs. Dey and others, and in the old Ballston School Building. Leaders in those early organization efforts were the late Rev. Henry F. Lutz, then a Washington pastor; the Rev. A. F. Smith, of Vienna, Va., and the Rev. C. L. Organ, of Indiana.

The congregation originally was known as the Ballston Christian Church.

THEODULPH

All glory, laud and honor
To Thee, Redeemer, King.
To whom the lips of children
Made sweet hosannas ring.

This early Latin hymn was composed in 820 A.D. by Theodulph, Bishop of Orleans, while a king's prisoner in the cloister of Anjou. The Roman church canonized him and his hymn is still sung as a processional in Protestant as well as Catholic churches.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Slightly Honorable,' at the Earle, Is More Than Slightly Hilarious

"SLIGHTLY HONORABLE." Walter Wanger's picturization of F. G. Presnell's story of "Send Another Coffin," adapted to the screen by Ken England, featuring Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Ruth Terry and Broderick, with Claire Dodd, Alan Dinehart, Janet Beecher, Phyllis Brooks, Douglas Dumbrille, Bernard Nedell, Eve Arden, Addison Richards, Douglas Fowley, John Sheehan, Howard Hickman, Willie Best, Ernest Truex and many more. Directed by Tay Garnett. Previewed Monday, June 10. At the Earle Theater.

There have been mystery comedies and mystery-comedies, but within our recollection only one "Slightly Honorable."

BELL

The new screen feature at the Earle achieves the paradoxical feat of making sudden death, coffins and funerals seem hilariously funny, no matter how you may have felt about them before. It is gaited to a hurricane pace and a great deal of the time doesn't make sense—only nonsense. But the mystery element never is lost sight of and, at the end, springs one of those unguessable surprises that leave an audience marveling at what a collective sap it is. The dialogue is ridiculous from beginning to end and occasionally red hot. The situations are bizarre and the action furious, in a playful way—such a playful way that the gals in the cast find themselves banged around almost as much as the men. They can take it, and, for once, so can the audience.

There would be no more sense in attempting an outline of plot than there is in the plot itself. The whole mad business revolves about the political warfare of two groups of corkscrew politicians out after paving contracts and the swag that goes with them. One by one, important figures begin to get themselves knocked off and everyone takes a hand in running down the murderer, or plural. The girls are a flibberty gibbet lot and their male companions even crazier than that.

The major load of levity rests upon the durable shoulders of Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Ruth Terry and Broderick Crawford and they toss off their peppery persiflage, and an occasional lethal knife, with glibness, accuracy and exciting intent. Alan Dinehart, as a district attorney like none you have ever seen; Bernard Nedell, as a craven hoodlum; Claire Dodd, as a comparatively innocent bystander and Eve Arden, a secretary to end all secretaries—and she finally is ended on the point of that knife—are the second-string principals, with Janet Beecher, Phyllis Brooks, Ernest Truex, Addison Richards, Douglas Dumbrille, Douglas Fowley and Willie Best filling in the more important of the remaining chinks. Not a slacker in the mob.

The "Keep Kool" stage revue cooked up by Harry Anger this week prevents its principals from doing that and some of them lashed the audience into a lather, too. These would be Ruth Petty, with her high-pressure songs, and Brown and Ames, with some monologuing and dancing that came within an eyelash of stopping the show. Barr and Estes contribute their familiar drollery in chatter and eccentric dances, with Marie Hollis adding her stint of acrobatic dancing in the bounteous and boneless manner. The Roxyettes, somehow minus their usual metronomic precision at yesterday's first performance, are in and out "On Park Avenue," "In a Sarong" and "On the Beach"—with those big, bouncing beach-balls in the last.

Eileen Ritter's "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" interlude turned up some very elegant croakers in the audience and a Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy in color, "A Gander at Mother Goose," carries out the frivolous purposes of the program by reducing familiar tales to a series of burlesque "blackouts." The Paramount News completes a Grade-A "silly season" bill.

Well, Well, Another Murder, Eh?

PAT O'BRIEN AND CLAIRE DODD
in two of the principal roles in Walter Wanger's production of "Slightly Honorable," an hilarious and homicidal comedy, now on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Edward Arnold, Ruth Terry and Broderick Crawford are among the many adding to the goofiness of this merry mystery-comedy

'Turnabout,' on Capitol Screen, Turns on Some Lusty Laughter

By Richard L. Coe

"TURNABOUT." United Artists-Hal Roach picturization of the novel by Thorne Smith, adapted to the screen by Mickell Novak, Berne Giler, John McClain and Rian James, with Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, John Hubbard, William Gargan, Verree Teasdale, Mary Astor, Donald Meek, Joyce Compton, Inez Courtney, Franklin Pangborn, Marjorie Main, Berton Churchill, Margaret Roach, Ray Turner, Norman Budd, Polly Ann Young, Eleanor Riley, Murray Alper, Miki Morita, Yolande Mallot and George Renavent. Directed by Mr. Roach. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

There are a lot of laughs in "Turnabout." And there should be, for the Capitol's new film was adapted from a whacky novel by "Topper's" Thorne Smith and is played by an expert company of farceurs.

It was Thorne Smith's happy idea to put into action that oft-expressed wish of human beings to change places with each other. With protoplasm and "The Night Life of the Gods" behind him, it was natural that the gay novelist should become intrigued by the most personal aspects of his "Turnabout" idea and this Hal Roach screen version has taken his suggestions very literally.

An Indian god in the shape of a relic sits on a bedroom shelf of an annoyingly athletic advertising man and his luscious but immobile wife. They bicker and always have bickered. And when they get onto that natural wish to exchange places, for the wife to enjoy the rush of office life and for the husband to sit around the house all day, the god takes action.

He switches them around so that the husband wakes up in his wife's trim form and the wife comes to in husband's active body. But they keep their own voices. The demoralizing effect of feminine habits in the masculine body and vice versa puts household, friends, office and business plans into sociable shambles.

Some Humorous Characterizations

As amusing as the idea itself are the states into which this mad procedure knocks innocent bystanders. Verree Teasdale is hard put upon in her normal capacity as secretary, but when the storm breaks, her surrendered spirit is a sight to enjoy. Adolphe Menjou and William Gargan are groggy from the shock their business associate has given them. Donald Meek is undiluted joy, as the butler-valet whose habit of wandering into shower-rooms at any hour brings on the d. t's. (which he liberally encourages). Inez Courtney, Franklin Pangborn, Mary Astor, Berton Churchill and Marjorie Main all contribute their established characterizations to the laugh-value of the film.

Carole Landis and John Hubbard have the perplexing leading roles and are very likable young people. It is in this picture, by the way and from Mr. Pangborn's character dubbed Mr. Pingboom, that Miss Landis' weird title of "Ping Girl" seems, for no particular reason, to have sprung.

This adaptation of the Thorne Smith pleasantry, however, has that inherent fault which any attempt to capture the cloud-like dafiness must have: thoughts, which are merely suggestions to the reader to be spun out on a purely personal basis, take on a concrete reality. To cap this too literal interpretation comes the film's fadeout warning: "All the characters in this story are purely fictional."

On the stage, the Capitol is offering the Sugar Blues music of Clyde McCoy and his remarkable trumpeting. It's elegant swing this band is playing and made all the more listenable by the suave singing of the Bennett Sisters and Wayne Gregg. McCoy and his boys play their latest recordings and bring out shouts of joy from the younger listeners.

Steve Garay, whose reputation as a mimic and jester has preceded him here, rewards Manager Gene Ford's patience in luring him to Washington with some clowning that gets solid applause. Doris Dupont tosses off smart tapping. Last on the bill, and surprisingly funny fellows, are the Nonchalants, three toss-about chaps who make their act the funniest ever by some swell side remarks delivered by the lithest of the trio. Sam Jack Kaufman and the Capitol orchestra have some fun—at last—with the "Poet and Peasant" overture to start things rolling.

Revised Version of "Nazi Spy" at Metropolitan

"CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY." Warner Brothers' expanded reissue of the screen play by Milton Krims and John Wexley, based on material gathered by Leon G. Turrou, starring Edward G. Robinson, with Francis Lederer, George Sanders, Paul Lukas, Henry O'Neil, Lya Lys, Grace Stafford, James Stephenson, Sig Rumann, Fern Tosers, Dorothy Tree, Hans von Tivardowsky, Frederick Vogeding, Robert Emmett Keane, Lucien Prival and scores more. Directed by Anatole Litvak. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Reinforced with new pertinent sequences, the "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" comes back to the Metropolitan for its third downtown run. To be quite accurate the "new" material is not all new, but includes sequences eliminated from the original picture as too outspoken. There are also news shot interludes of Nazi walkovers in the Scandinavian countries which have occurred since the original picture was made.

An Austrian and a Czechoslovakian actor, both refugees from Naziism, give the greatest performances of their careers in this screen warning against spies in our midst. Austrian Paul Lukas and Czech Francis Lederer drop their former leading-man parts to become a pair of the lowest heels that ever degraded their American citizenship by becoming spies for a foreign government. Lukas is a bund leader who adds travesty to disloyalty by continually trumpeting about his "Americanism." But it's just another "ism" as far as he's concerned. Lederer is an army deserter and embezzler, who plays upon weaklings among his former associates to secure troop information. But he's the prize weakling, in person.

Among the smaller fry in this hell's broth of betrayal are airline and munition plant workers and a ship's stewardess. But they're all alike in betraying each other and their employers, as well as their country. The long arm of the Gestapo exacts vengeance from two and the rest are lucky enough to face an American judge.

While "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" is distinctly a first line and significant film, its story suffers somewhat by frequent interpolations of newsreels, headlines and national policy summaries. These are more worthy as background than entertainment.

Acting throughout is forceful and expert, though Lederer and Lukas display the most subtle conceptions of the implications of their roles. Edward G. Robinson is a bit hampered in the part of head G-man, the situation demanding a rather inflexible portrayal.

The situations of the picture, we're told, have been garned from real-life spy and bund disclosures. In Lukas' entanglement with women, all newspaper readers will recognize angles of the courtroom troubles of a prominent bund leader.

The newsreel again rings the war tocsin. And even the Porky cartoon is about war among the fishes. But it brings laughs as a welcome relief from a program replete with the seriousness of life in 1940.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, June 14.

Dick Powell was so surprised at my telling my age, he said, "Gosh! Even my own wife lies about hers at times."

HOPPER

But neither of them should mind telling theirs. They look younger than they did five years ago. Preston Sturges not only dreamed up the idea for Dick's next picture, "The New Yorkers," but he's directing it. The other day he was moving his own furniture on the set, while prop boys stood aside, fearful the union might hear about it.

George Brent and not Fred MacMurray goes into "Honeymoon for Three" at Warners. Yes, George's romance with Sheridan is still Torrid Zoning.

When Barbara O'Neill becomes Mrs. Josh Logan, June 18, in Greenwich, Conn., it will unite two people whose careers started when he directed her in "Parnell" in New York. It was then Sam Goldwyn saw her, sent for her to do the wife in "Stella Dallas." Josh was here doing a picture. He did her test, which got her the job.

She gives a beautiful performance in "All This and Heaven, Too," and won't retire from the screen or stage. Josh is planning to star her in a New York play this coming season.

If Bob Ritchie can get Ilona Massey and Tony Martin, he'll star them on Broadway in a new play called "April in Paris." But I'm thinking Alice Faye will get Tony first, and he'll be more than willing to stay right here in Hollywood.

Two Papago Indians working for Wes Ruggles in "Arizona" are sure he's gone completely "loco" because he pays them $10 a day for sleeping. They just back themselves against a wall, and how those boys can sleep! They've been at it three days now.

Overheard in a theatre—a young girl asking her escort, "Was there ever a person in real life called Lillian Russell?"

A feminine star in town has been parading around her front lawn and attracting an awful lot of attention in the shortest shorts ever seen. Her name? Baby Sandy—one of the cutest kids I've ever seen.

She very quickly got onto the fact that when the studio nurse took her out of a scene, she wouldn't have to work but could play. Now, when she doesn't feel like working, she doesn't wait for the nurse—runs to her and wants to play all the time!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

ENTERPRISE: When the Duke and Duchess of Windsor announced their proposed visit to this country, one of the principal criticisms directed against them was the fact that their sponsor, Charles Bedeaux, was operating a speed-up system in factory work—a system to which labor objected . . . Mr. Bedeaux then returned to Europe. He went to France, when the war began, and was assigned to the air ministry. He now is in Morocco, still working for the French government. His job has been to adapt the Bedeax speed-up system to all plane factories.

APPLAUSE: Before Larry Adler went onstage Tuesday night, in "Keep Off the Grass," Ray Bolger told him: "If you play 'Caprice Viennois' as your last number, it will go well. Take my advice, and play it" . . . The harmonica player agreed, and concluded his performance by playing "Caprice Viennois." The audience applauded, but the lustiest applause came from the occupant of a front-row seat, who clapped his hands long after the others had stopped . . . The pleased Adler then saw Bolger in the wings, and reported the success. "But how did you know that music would go well tonight?" he asked Bolger . . . "That fellow in the front row, who kept applauding it, composed that music," Bolger informed. "That was Fritz Kreisler."

STUNT: If the rush of war-news had not kept the staff of Time magazine busy Saturday night, the closing performance of William Saroyan's "Love's Old Sweet Song" would have had an unusual and memorable termination . . . In that show Alan Hewitt recited a list of all the editors and contributing editors of Time. He read those names with great dramatic expression, rolling each syllable as if he were reciting the Gettysburg Address . . . But the rush of war news prevented Time's entire staff from attending the final performance—during which, as their names were uttered on stage, each would rise in the audience, and respond "present."

WAR: Alec Waugh, the British novelist, wrote this letter to Farrar & Rinehart, his publishers: "I'm just back from the B. E. F. It wasn't exactly a picnic. The house in which I was billeted was hit by a bomb—a direct hit. Fortunately, we escaped, and the manuscript of my new book is still intact. The world's not very cheerful at this moment, but I'm managing to have some fun. I think we'll be all right. I'm sure we will. And I have a feeling that now, having seen two wars, I may be able to write a good novel of my generation. So add, for the year, 1946, another war-novel for your list."

DEFEAT: James R. Young, the I. N. S. correspondent in Tokyo who was arrested by the Japanese officials, spent 61 days in prison there. He managed to establish friendly relations with one of the guards, who permitted Young to borrow his sun-ray lamp—which the prisoner used until the day of his release . . . A few days ago the liberated Young returned to Manhattan. Because of what he considered "grueling experiences," he suggested the need of a vacation. His editor studied his sun-tanned face, and said: "You look as if you've just had a vacation" . . . And so now, Jimmy Young is back at work, at the I. N. S. desk in N. Y.

CHATTER: The Saturday Evening Post was barred in Canada Tuesday. It means a loss of $115,000 a week to the magazine . . . Sid Richardson, the Texas oil man, is reported to be withdrawing his backing of Elliott Roosevelt's Texas State network . . . The Lunts issued a bonus, from their own salaries, to the cast of "There Shall Be No Night" . . . Those elegant sets used in the Olivier-Leigh production of "Romeo and Juliet," were taken to the dumps and burned.

DEMAND: Buddy de Sylva is negotiating for Mae West to play Ethel Merman's lusty role in the road tour of "DuBarry Was a Lady," but Miss West's terms, to date, are prohibitive. Buddy was asked about the deal and reported her excessive demands . . . "I'd give my right arm to have Mae play it, but she wants my left arm, too," said de Sylva. "And Mae, not I, is supposed to be the Venus."

CRIME: Some months ago the N. Y. Attorney General's office waged a campaign against the loan-shark companies which had exacted illegal paymets from small borrowers. This campaign, waged by Attorney General Bennett and his aide, Ben Heffner, was successful. The defendant companies agreed to refund the excess payments, and the suits were settled . . . The prosecutors now have the money, but are unable to locate many of the borrowers who were victimized. And so, next week, ads will be placed in all papers, asking these victims to appear and receive their due.

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of "Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, June 14. (INS)—A hurry call has been sent out for Betty Grable, who wasn't due to report in Hollywood on her Twentieth Century-Fox contract until July 1. Betty arrives Monday to replace Alice Faye in "Down Argentine Way," which will now go into production on June 24. Starting date was delayed originally in the hope that Alice would be sufficiently recovered from her emergency operation to co-star with Don Ameche in the Technicolor musical, but on latest advices from her physician, Darryl Zanuck and Associate Producer Harry Joe Brown decided to put Betty in the role instead. Studio has great hopes for young Miss Grable since her big Broadway hit in "Du Barry Was A Lady."

LOUELLA PARSONS

Others in the cast, which Irving Cummings will direct, are Carmen Miranda, Charlotte Greenwood, Henry Stephenson, Cesar Romero and Chris-Pin Martin. Cesar is still hospitalized with typhoid, but is improving so rapidly there's a goood chance he may be able to fill his assignment.

Paulette Goddard is going to have to excuse herself from that summer stock engagement at the Cape Cod Playhouse. Her studio, Paramount, has just decided to give her the femme lead opposite Fred Astaire, in "Second Chorus," and Director H. C. Potter gives the go signal on July 15. Astaire was signed a few days ago by Boris Morros and Robert Stillman, who are producing this independently for Para release. Artie Shaw and his new band have been set for some time. Fred will do a Ginger Rogers and go dramatic in this one. He plays a trumpet player, not a hoofer, and any dancing will be incidental. He may tap a toe playfully during a scene but there'll be no elaborate routines.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: L. O. P. who's gone Hawaiian in a big way, would have been green with envy if she'd seen Bette Davis' outfit at the "Ataht" preem. Betty wore a high-necked, full-trained organdy holoku, copied after Hawaiian formal attire; instead of a handbag Edgar Bergen's gal, Joan Valerie, carried a white monogrammed chiffon handerchief tied up like a knapsack; Lloyd Bacon is telling friends he'll marry beauteous blonde Florence Baker as soon as his divorce is final. They were at the Grace Hayes' lodge together and she was wearing an eye-dazzling sparkler.

Inez Courtney will go to Italy to join her husband, the Marquis Luigi Filiasi, who was summoned home. And the method the Italian government used to get men to return will make you sore—they cabled them their mothers were desperately ill; during the Connie Moore-Johnny Maschio housewarming, Helene Del Valle got a long distance call from the devoted Lee Bowman, who's on location for the Wallie Beery pic "Wyoming;" the Motion Picture Mothers of America, a social group made up of the ma's of such celebrated progeny as Joan Crawford, Loretta Young, Nelson Eddy and Nancy Kelly are celebrating their first anniversary with a big blow-out tonight and some of the "kids" will kibitz.

Latest word from the "Goodbye to Love" front is that Joan Blondell's doctor has okayed it for her to open in the show in San Francisco June 17; Madeleine Carroll's manager just received a cable saying that she had landed safely in Lisbon and was hiring a plane to take her as close to Paris as the military authorities will permit; Mary Astor tosses a circus party Saturday for daughter Marilyn Thorpe's ninth birthday. There'll be ponies, merry-go-rounds, popcorn and pink lemonade. Can I come, Mary? I'll furnish my own merry-go-round.

Medwick Drives in One Run in Debut; 27,998 Noisy Fans Witness Game

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 14. — Inspired by the vision of a National League pennant, the Brooklyn Dodgers performed like men of destiny today as they conquered Cincinnati's champion Reds 2 to 0 on the two-hit hurling of Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin.

The debut of slugging Joe Medwick as a Dodger and the natural luster of a clash between the leading rivals for the flag brought out a noisy, typically Brooklyn crowd of 27,998 fans, 10,241 of whom were ladies' day guests.

Medwick was not exactly majestic at the plate, but he covered an amazing amount of territory in making six putouts in left field and batted in one of the Dodgers' two runs. This was more than satisfactory for the spectators, who cheered his every move.

Dodgers Increase Lead

The triumph gave the Dodgers a full game lead over Cincinnati, with three games in the series still to be played tomorrow and Sunday. There were about 5,000 vacant seats in Ebbets Field today, but officials of the Brooklyn club said there would be none for the remaining games.

From the time elaborate Flag Day ceremonies had been completed by the American Legion, the Dodgers never gave the Reds a chance. They scored on Gene (Junior) Thompson in the first inning and again in the third.

Hamlin, on the other hand, allowed only a single in the third and another in the seventh, each with two out, never gave a walk and never let a Red get to second.

A spectacular show of pitching, supported by perfect help in the field, gave Hamlin his fifth victory against three defeats.

Thompson Allows 5 Hits

In the first inning Dixie Walker led off with a walk and after he had been erased stealing, Cookie Lavagetto slashed a double into right center and Joe Vosmik brought him around with a terrific single to right.

In the third frame after Walker singled and two were out, Thompson struck out Vosmik, but Catcher Ernie Lombardi let the pitch get away and Vosmik reached first and Walker second. This set the stage for Medwick's only hit, a hard single to left that scored Walker.

Three of the four other hits the Dodgers made were doubles, but each blow was isolated in a different inning and caused no further trouble.

Hal Newhouser Gives Five Hits; Masterson, Krakky Touched for 14

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

Detroit, June 14.—The Nats' Western invasion opened here today, but it was not exactly a smashing success. In fact, the Nats were able to stir up only five hits and got themselves licked by the highly decisive score of 10 to 1.

A wonderful time was had by most all of the Tigers, who were glad the Nats were here. It was an enjoyable afternoon especially for young Harold Newhouser, the 19-year-old graduate of the Detroit sandlots, who took advantage of the Nats' presence to record his fourth big league victory.

Against Newhouser, the Nats were a feeble gang. Only in the fourth inning, when they escaped the ignominy of a shutout, did they get a runner as far as third base against the young Detroit southpaw, who was alternately bamboozling the Nats with a wide-breaking curve and blazing a fast ball past 'em. He struck out seven.

In the field, the Nats didn't exactly play flawless baseball, either. On reliable information we can state that they tossed four errors into the proceedings. But the pitching of young Walter Masterson today was not the type that could be scuttled in the field. The Tigers bombarded him for most of their 14 hits, six for extra bases, and when Masterson was withdrawn they greeted Joe Krakauskas like money from home.

Rick Kicked in First

When Zeke Bonura wasn't driving a run across the plate for the Nats today, nobody else was. Bonura doubled into left field in the fourth inning to fetch their lone run home, but in that inning the Nats missed the boat despite their score. After Newhouser had opened the inning by walking Lewis and Welaj, Gee Walker met the emergency by striking out, and after Bonura doubled, Travis grounded out and Buddy Myer accepted a third strike in a disgusted sort of way.

Rick Ferrell set the Tigers up in a 1-0 lead in the first inning, after McCoskey tripled against the wall in left center with one out. Bonura grabbed Gehringer's grounder and

Tribe's Allen Hurls 2-Hitter, Beats A's, 8-0

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 14.—Only five outs separated Johnny Allen from a no-hit pitching triumph today. Sam Chapman spoiled that dream with a single over Shortstop Lou Boudreau's head, but Allen turned in a two-hit, 8 to 0 shutout for Cleveland in the opener of the four-game series with Philadelphia.

Allen, who has never returned to consistent winning form after an arm operation a year and a half ago, was the master today for his third 1940 victory against the same number of setbacks. He opened by walking Benny McCoy and then retired 22 batters in order.

Boudreau jumped high in an effort to prevent Chapman's eighth-inning single, but couldn't reach the ball. A moment later, Pinchhitter Joe Gantenbein made the Athletics' second and last single.

Oscar Vitt Jokes About Players' Ouster Movement

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 14.—Looking at Oscar Vitt today, you'd say he was a man who had no fear of being kicked out of his job.

He looked calm. He joked. His Cleveland Indians, close to first place, talked about the war—the European one, not the battle they started when half of them painted the Tribe manager as the jittery, terrible-tongued Mr. Vitt, and demanded that he be fired.

"Well, I see we've chased the war off page one." Vitt remarked to the players at the usual clubhouse strategy session before today's 8-0 victory over Philadelphia.

"I'm sorry about the unfortunate thing that has happened, but I've talked the situation over with the big boss and he told me I'm remaining in charge and he's investigating the complaint which some of you made."

But there was no doubt that Vitt, beneath the surface, was stung by developments. And there was considerable belief tonight the loquacious former third baseman, who appeared on the Cleveland scene in 1936 after pronounced success at Newark, was on the way out. If so, it was expected that Coach Luke Sewell, long-time Cleveland catcher who is popular with the players, would be named at least acting manager.

The "big boss" is Alva Bradley, Indians' president. Bradley, smiling too conferred about an hour with Vitt to start an inquiry into charges of 12 players that Vitt ridiculed them and ruined their morale.

Vitt agreed remarking to Pitcher Mel Harder after Harder was knocked out of the box at Boston recently: "It's about time you won one, the money you're getting," but said he "regretted it later."

Another complaint was that Vitt stormed around the dugout and hammered the bat rack as the Red Sox were clubbing Pitcher Bob Feller, and said in Feller's hearing: "Look at him. He's supposed to be my ace. I'm supposed to win a pennant with that kind of pitching."

Since the dozen complaints included such key men as Pitchers Feller, Harder and Al Milnar, it was pretty obvious that Bradley would have to find a big peace pipe if he didn't discharge the 50-year-old pilot.

"I'm going to investigate and see

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, June 15.—It finally came to pass after 40 years of American League history—a ball team walking into the owner's office and demanding that the manager be fired—but not surprising is the fact that Cleveland ultimately was the locale. Baseball in Cleveland has been working up to this sort of thing for many years.

POVICH

Cleveland has owned all of the perfect ingredients for such a revolt for a long time: (1) A vacillating mouse-like club owner who rarely takes a stand. (2) As choice a collection of prima-donna ball players as ever were assembled on any one team. (3) A manager given to popping off; and, (4) baseball writers who take themselves too seriously and pontificate all over the place. Mix up that sort of company and you're bound to have a fine stew.

In Cleveland it has been simmering ever since Alva Bradley took over the club. He was a success in the real estate and railroad business, but in baseball he soon proved that he didn't know the score. He hit an all-time low for ludicrous conduct by a club owner back in the early thirties when Walter Johnson, then his manager, had a tiff with the veteran infielder, Willie Kamm.

The easy-going Johnson, finally irked by what he declared to be Kamm's meddling with the young ball players on the club, sent Kamm back to Cleveland from the East. Bradley didn't back up his manager. In a weak-kneed statement he was referring the case to Judge Landis, despite the fact that it was none of Landis' business. The Judge promptly tossed the incident back into Bradley's lap.

We don't know what Bradley will do about the players' complaint about Vitt, but if he doesn't chase them all back into the uniforms and tell 'em to play ball for Vitt or get the heck off his ball club you may have Mr. Bradley. This is no time for a club owner to back down on a manager on any such complaint. If he has an ounce of gumption, he'll tell athletes that ball players do not fire managers—that is the prerogative of the club owner.

Cleveland has been no soft spot for Vitt. He has had to contend with, firstly, as temperamental a crew as was ever assembled under one hapless management. Ben Chapman is no sweet-tempered lambkin as Managers Joe McCarthy and Bucky Harris long ago discovered. Chapman never understands why he is benched, despite the fact that his batting average is there for all to see.

Pitcher Johnny Allen never contributed to the comfort of any manager except when he was winning ball games. Allen never did like the idea of being superseded as the ace pitcher of the Cleveland staff and always acted as if he were aware he was once a Yankee. Roy Weatherly is a fellow of very decided opinions and Rollie Hemsley's record has not been exactly exemplary.

In the background, sitting in the press box, were fellows who rarely hesitated to magnify the mistakes of Vitt. Whatever else may be said about Cleveland's baseball journalism, it has always been interesting. Incidents that may pass unnoticed in other towns are the subjects of scathing editorials in the Cleveland baseball press, and while a Cleveland manager is duly euglogized in his hour of triumph, he is something else again when the Indians are not doing so well.

The strange part of the open revolt this week is that Vitt has a better record than any other manager with the Indians since they won their last pennant 20 years ago. In his first two years, he piloted the club into third place, and this season he has had them hovering around the lead from the start. Nowhere except Cleveland are the Indians regarded as a third place club, but for the crime of putting a third place club into third place and keeping it there, Vitt is supposed to be a failure.

His chief crime, however, appears to be his failure to retain the respect of his ball players. That he hasn't done so is patent. Even Bob Feller was a member of the brigade that trooped into Bradley's office after his job. His athletes are down on Vitt, and on that score he is no success. It's a tight spot for Vitt, if he is not backed to the limit by Bradley. There aren't any other big league jobs for managers who are fired because they can't hold their players in line.

Vitt, of course, contributed to this current grief. Like many of his own ball players, he didn't know when to suffer in silence. His mouthings have irked other managers in the league, and Joe McCarthy was particularly wroth when Vitt accused the Yanks of meddling with the batting stroke of Charley Keller who was in a slump at the time.

Last year the Cleveland players were ready to go to Bradley with much the same complaint about Vitt, but they either lost their courage or desisted for the sake of harmony. They could still earn about $800 each for finishing third in the race and they buckled down to do that by winning 19 of their last 22 games. As far as they were concerned, it was too bad, but unavoidable, that they also had made Vitt look good with their late-season spurt.

Vitt's chief crime in the eyes of the players were his recurrent references to the Newark club with which he had won a minor league pennant in 1937. On frequent occasions he compared the Indians, unfaorably, collectively and individually, with that minor league club and they did not like it. Vitt heaped his current grief on himself, perhaps. But if Bradley lets the athletes get away with their mutiny, there'll be no terrific rush for the job of successor to Vitt.

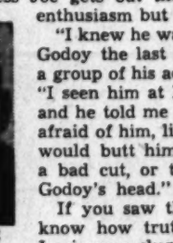
New York, June 14.—Tony Galento, the gorilla who can't lick them both, thinks Joe Louis will knock out Arturo Godoy when they fight next Thursday night at the Yankee Stadium. But not unless Joe gets out there and slugs with not only enthusiasm but rare aim.



CONSIDINE

"I knew he wasn't going to do much against Godoy the last time they fought," Tony told a group of his admirers named Harry Mendel. "I seen him at Pompton just before the fight and he told me he was afraid of Godoy. Not afraid of him, like scared. Afraid that Godoy would butt him with his head and open up a bad cut, or that he'd break his hands on Godoy's head."

If you saw the fight, or the pictures, you know how truthful are the signor'd words. Louis was sluggish at the start, because he underrated the Chilean's stomach for the match, but in the latter stages the champion fought exactly like a man who was afraid of a butt or a hand-smash. In fact, he verified this the day after the fight.

"I cracked up my own hands on Godoy in our second fight," Galento recalled. "I broke 'em up so bad I had to postpone that fight against Ettore. And even the night I fought Ettore I had to have a shot of novacaine in my dukes, to make 'em numb. I cracked 'em trying to find an opening. That Godoy don't give you too many, and you always gotta watch out for that head."

Although the record books show that Godoy beat Galento twice, Tony doesn't accept the second defeat. That was the one in Chicago, the night in 1937 that Louis won the title from Jim Braddock. Tony still has the clippings from Chicago papers, at least the ones that said he was robbed.

"They let the bum get away with too much," Tony reflected. "Donovan should have started counting whenever Godoy's hands touched the floor, in them crouches he used against Louis."

There's plenty of time between now and July 2, when he fights Max Baer, but Galento already is as jumpy, irritable and raring to go as if it were the day before the fight. The things he did to a colored sparring mate named Tom Schenk on Thursday should be looked into by a humane society. Not only that but he got in an argument with Jimmy Frain, his trainer for 11 years, fired him, took a departing punch at him and—with an aim which may need a little brushing up—accidentally knocked out his faithful chauffeur and rooter, Blackie.

One of Amateurism's last citadels will be erected today at Roslyn, Long Island, when the United Hunts Racing Association holds New York's only such meeting of the summer at the estate of Charles V. Hickox. Owners of jumpers all over the East will send their timber-toppers to the races at their own expense. Everybody will lose money, with the exception of the 12 pari-mutuel booths which will be installed along the leafy jumping course. But the association—with Al Vanderbilt, the guests, Jock Whitney and others of that kidney behind it—believes its worth the cost. It was the association, you know, which brought back racing in New York by engineering the arrest of a bookie, which led to the establishment of oral betting and the eradication of the Charles Evans Hughes anti-racing laws.

Quick Vine Scores Third Straight Victory at Charles Town

Jockey Bernhardt Astride Winner; Royal Marriage Third in Race

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 14.—Quick Vine, a 6-year-old daughter of Haste, packed her speed in her hoofs for the third time today and made it as many victories in a row over this track. Owned by Mrs. M. V. Jenkins, wife of the nearby Ransom, W. Va., grocer, Quick Vine scampered around the six-furlong course to lead A. G. Bailey's Ravenhurst to the wire by three lengths while under good handling by Jockey Bob Bernhardt, a Baltimore boy. Third money went to the favored Royal Marriage, a half length from the place position.

The chief money showed for Red Idol, a dull one today, and Royal Marriage with the result that Quick Vine paid a juicy $18.80 mutuel while stepping the route in 1:16, four-fifths of a second over the track record. The track was lightning fast and the weather some of the best of the meeting.

Bernhardt brought Quick Vine out of the gate on top and from that point to the wire the others were chasers. Jockey C. Kirk tried hard to make Ravenhurst a catcher but even some stinging thrusts with the whip could not make the game colt stay with the front runner. Royal Marriage rallied mildly but not enough to be a serious menace.

Capt. Ewart Johnston's Delhi Dan scored a neck decision over William Amos' He Rolls in a sizzling battle of juveniles in the day's opener. E. A. Nicodemus' Mayfern was third. Delhi Dan's victory, at a mere $3.80 mutuel, was sweet music to the favorite players.

The "1-3" combination in the daily double proved a lucky one and produced a $91.20 mutuel. Hi-Ada won the second race at an $8.60 payoff, while Princess Lady took the third race at $11.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DELHI DAN, $3.80, $2.80, $2.20; HE ROLLS, $3.60, $2.80; MAYFERN, $3.00.

DELHI DAN, hard ridden throughout, disposed of MAYFERN to take lead and had to be kept to pressure to stave off closing bid of HE ROLLS. The latter had to be vigorously handled to reach contention on outside and was wearing down winner at end. MAYFERN set good pace while saving ground and weakened gradually after being displaced. BUD ON had no excuses. BUTCHER BOY was in tight quarters between leaders early and stopped. The others were not prominent.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:04½. Off 3:06. Winner, Julia A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HI-ADA, $8.80, $6.00, $4.20; HAGERSTOWN BOY, $12.80, $8.40; CORA KAY, $3.20.

HI-ADA assumed command in opening furlong, saved ground while setting pace and held HAGERSTOWN BOY safe in closing test. HAGERSTOWN BOY, in thick of contention from start and under punishment in final quarter, showed good effort. CORA KAY was well placed early and rallied mildly. MACHILLA was taken up and allowed to drop back in opening furlong, came wide in stretch and closed with bold rush. CUSTER was used up chasing HI-ADA under hustling tactics and weakened. OLIVILO could not threaten. MORNING FLIGHT was not a factor.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31½. Off 3:32. Winner, S. B. Berry's br. f. PRINCESS LADY, always forward factor, was lucky to get through between horses on backstretch to get to front and held on gamely under hand riding. MY GRAND was bothered by BRAINCHILD directly after break, was taken up when in close quarters on backstretch and came willingly at end. SALBURNE was strongly handled throughout while racing wide and showed good effort. NETTA WOOD closed gamely from slow beginning. BRAINCHILD went to her knees at break, was rushed along rail and weakened. GOODBYE PEACE set early pace and faltered. ARROW GIRL was through early.

Daily Double, Hi-ADA and PRINCESS LADY, Paid $91.20

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:01½. Off 4:05. Winner, A. S. Hamilton, jr.'s gr. m. MISS WING, raced while setting good pace, drew out in stretch run to win with some speed in reserve. RUNOUT saved ground while strongly handled and closed under punishment. GREEN WATER closed full of run from sluggish beginning. BLUE BOO raced wide and weakened. WALLI was closest to pace to stretch and tired. SHANTEE showed a dull effort. The others were outrun. GLISTEN threw boy and ran off for 6 furlongs before start.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:32½. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Bond's b. f. AUTUMN ECHO broke alertly, drew out gradually and was kept to pressure to end while showing a startling form flip flop. SUN DROPS was hard ridden while close up and closed gamely. MISS POOL saved ground and had no excuses while closing willingly. THOA had speed in spots. ASTERISK was shut off by KIRTON entering stretch. KIRTON, fractious at post, was yanked up repeatedly going to first turn, raced wide thereafter and hung in stretch drive. TOP SHELL flashed early speed and stopped.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:57½. Off 4:58½. Winner, Mrs. M. V. Jenkins' b. m. RAVENHURST was hard ridden while close up and closed gamely under punishment. ROYAL MARRIAGE saved ground entering stretch and rallied mildly. INTELLIGENTSIA was off slowly and made up some ground. RED IDOL weakened. GRAND WALTZ was not serious factor. LEAD PLEASE flashed early speed and stopped.

LATERAL PASS was within striking distance from start, responded when shaken up coming into stretch and closed willingly. TULEYRIES STAR set a good pace, saving ground and was weakening at finish. Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

I don't know that there is a word of truth in it but it's still a good story. I mean the one about the tout who wanted to get even with one of his fellows and sold him a "sucker list." The purchaser dug up a horse with a chance and sent collect telegrams. Every one of the messages returned with the receiving party unknown. The boys swear that the tout got the names off tombstones in a Washington cemetery. The press box referred to last Thursday's program as "Amateur day." For the first time during the session here Palumbo, Vessell and Hernandez, the big three of local jockeys, were shut out. Racing Secretary Freddie Burton did a good job on the Saturday program, headed by the Senator M. O. Rouss Memorial Handicap. The field includes Dulie, Sunny Rose, Charming Herod and others and there should be a lot of hustling and scuffling before the winner is determined. The seventh race is an excellent sprint involving Butterman, Prosit, Stubbs and other speedsters. A. S. Bowman reports that Schley Buck broke down. Timonetta, which tried to knock the top off the starting gate with her head, has been placed on the schooling list. Some of her backers the other day will be satisfied if she remains on the list for the rest of her days. Johnny Harris has taken first call on the jockey's services of Martinez. Is that a marcel wave in the front of Pappy Witmer's hair or has his hat been creasing there? Chief Evergreen pulled up sore in that last race, but not as sore as Mrs. Bennings' lovely boy, after he had been made the best bet. Looks as if we will have to keep The Chief off the track when it's hard. John Bosley has shipped Capstick, Artist and Erada back to his Maryland farm. Friend Ray Bell phoned in regard to the Needy Children's Camp Fund. If you can spare something for a worthy cause, send your check or money order to Claude Kniseley, Riggs National Bank. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Adhelmar appears to have an edge over this kind and could overcome the unfavorable inside position to take the purse. Redwings will like the short route and is fit but a bad post actor. Travelo has been away a long time and could be dangerous.

Second race—Miss Kantar set the pace for good ones on the milers and could surprise at the first asking hereabouts. Gets in light and I'm going to string along. Paper Girl was cut loose last out and missed. Seplin is a possibility.

Third race—Fredrick is about ready to win a race of this kind. Likes the route and is in fair shape Stealing Home belongs here and and will be a factor. Jumelus ran a good race at staggering odds last out and could surprise.

Fourth race—Super John was third in a recent test and had poor racing luck. With clear sailing today this fellow could take it all. Gold Sweep came back after a long layoff and jogged over an off track. Appears fit. Betwick's last was a beaut.

Fifth race—Gold D'Or won over a somewhat similar field in a recent start. Likes the route and has worked well. Golden Key won over an off track and prefers fast going. Anya's light weight should help.

Sixth race—Dulie has been a consistent winner in this brand of company. Appears capable of handling the weight and I see no reason for mistakes. Charming Herod, with a week's rest, will be a threat. Sunny Rose and Tristenagh, the latter a newcomer from New York, are money possibilities.

Seventh race—I'm going to Stubbs in this field. This one has been getting off a bit slowly of late. Gets a nice chunk of weight from Butterman. The latter is fit as hands can make him. Prosit belongs with these.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Bright Light, Judges Bid and Chalatour.

Spanish Spear Captures 3-Year-Old Title at Upperville

Mrs. Lee's Charge Wins Three Blues

By Anne Hagner

Upperville, Va., June 14.—Living up to all the promise he showed as a 2-year-old, Mrs. D. N. Lee's Spanish Spear was named 3-year-old champion of the Upperville Colt and Horse Show, which opened a two-day stand near here today.

Spanish Spear, winner in the same ring last year, took three blue ribbons during the day to emerge with the coveted juvenile crown. The reserve award went to Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Zarp, just returned to Virginia after dominating the 3-year-old events at the Devon (Pa.) show.

The title winner, a bright chestnut with white stockings on his hind legs, is one of the flashiest youngsters at Grafton Farm, and his triumph was no surprise to the 2,000 spectators who gathered in the famed oak grove where hunters have been proving their merit since 1853.

Although Spanish Spear was the day's steadiest individual winner, Ernest Redmon's Middleburg barns came in for a lion's share of honors as his No Mistake, Glamour Man, Rascality, Our Time and several younger half-breds were seldom out of the ribbons. Redmon's string is expected to go far this season, for it has done considerable winning since the start of the current horse show year.

The class for lightweight green hunters, one of the largest on the card, went to the Peach Brothers' home-bred Mountsville, who had indifferent success in the ring last year, but has come forward recently with several well-earned awards. The big 4-year-old chestnut also picked up a number of secondary ribbons today.

Surprise to the second-guessers was the elimination of Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Bon Nuit in the lightweight class, on the grounds that stallions should not be shown in hunter events. The good-looking son of Royal Canopy, full brother to Mrs. Whitney's Gray Knight, turned in a brilliant round and was at the head of the list on the basis of performance.

Fortunately for the Llangollen color-bearer, however, he was able to mark up a clean round in the handicap event to win his only blue ribbon of the day. He was ridden by Roland Ridgeway.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry's second representative, To Victory, added to Zarp's laurels by annexing the event for 4-year-olds and under, shown over fences.

Advertising Club Tourney To Ehrlich

A three-over par 73 by Jack Ehrlich was the best score turned in during the annual golf tournament and field day of the Advertising Club of Washington yesterday at Kenwood Country Club. A. W. Ardizone was next with an even 80.

George Burns stepped in to prevent the clean sweep of the prizes by the Ehrlich's, scoring 90, 20—70, to beat Al Ehrlich's 83, 11—72, by two strokes for low net. F. Frost won third low net with 81, 7—84.

A field of 27 members and guests competed.

G. B. Pearsall won the Acacia Trophy in the annual tournament of the Bond Club yesterday at Congressional, with 108, 35—73. John F. Brawner tied for the trophy with 76, 3—73, and lost in a draw and accepted the low gross prize. Other blind bogey winners included John Hoffman, 84, 14—70, and W. C. Coe, 95, 20—75.

Aztecs Trounce Pawnees in Derby Series Before 3,600

Chicago's Aztecs dusted off the Washington Pawnees in their Roller Derby game before 3,600 persons at Riverside Stadium last night, 17 to 12.

The Aztecs accounted for their twelfth victory in 25 games and will tie the series at 13-all in the event of victory tonight in the second last game of the competition at 8:15 o'clock.

The Aztecs were leading at 14-11 while going into open house, and Alicia Gadias clinched it for Chicago at this point when she scored. Eddie Fetter added another point, but Jack Hatcher came back with two more.

Dick Murphy Scores Thrilling Victory Over 2d-Seeded Player; Welsh Turns Back Smith Easily

By Jack Munhall.

Jabbing the upset-dizzy City of Washington tennis tournament with another sliver of surprise, Dapper Dick Murphy yesterday eliminated second-seeded Hugh Lynch in a thrilling semifinal match at Edgemoor Club. The scores were 6—1, 3—6, 7—5.

But before you go overboard in acclaim for Murphy, the little machine salesman who overcame 4—0 and 5—3 deficits to win the third and deciding set, stop! Instead prepare to shed tears of sympathy, for as a reward for his courage and skill yesterday he will be forced to meet Barney Welsh in the finals Sunday. The match between Murphy and Lynch was just about as futile as a pair of heavyweights slugging it out to earn a title fight with Louis.

Before Murphy and Lynch stepped on the courts for their marathon battle that left both limp with exhaustion, Welsh polished off fourth-ranked Alphonso Smith with the same nonchalance that has marked his ten-year domination of District tennis, 6—3, 6—4.

Climaxed Exciting Play

Easily the climax of a hectic tournament which already had seen the elimination of four heavy favorites by unranked outsiders was the Murphy-Lynch struggle which so absorbed a large gallery that many a cold supper was served last night in the Bethesda section.

It was a see-saw match throughout. Murphy, in allowing Lynch only one game in the first set, appeared much the superior player and apparently was en route to a crushing victory. But Lynch, winner of the tournament in 1938 and a finalist in both 1937 and 1939, snapped back to decisively outplay his unseeded opponent in the second stanza and set the stage for an exciting denouement.

Four games down in that final set, Murphy, who had seemed much the more exhausted of the two, suddenly showed signs of revitalization. He pulled up to 3—4 and then 4—5, and then broke Lynch's service in the tenth game to deadlock the set. Once on even terms, Murphy took no chance on again losing his advantage and poured over a great barrage of placements to capture two games.

Hurler Wins Own Game

Beaumont, Tex., June 14 (AP).—Clay Smith, of Beaumont, pitched no-hit ball for 8 1-3 innings today, then crossed the plate with the only run of the game in the tenth after holding Shreveport of the Texas League to a lone bingle, a triple.

Phils Bow To Revamped Cards, 6 to 2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 14.—The St. Louis Cardinals came through today for Billy Southworth, their new manager, with a 6-2 verdict over the Philadelphia Phillies before 3,000 spectators at Shibe Park.

In his first appearance as the Card's leader, Ray Blades' successor saw another newcomer to St. Louis start out fast. Ernie Koy, secured in the Brooklyn deal involving Ducky Medwick, led a nine-hit attack on Hugh Mulcahy and Clyde Smoll with two safeties, one a triple.

Bob Bowman allowed the Phils ten hits, which he kept well scattered. The home club played without the services of Merrill May, third baseman, who injured his shoulder in the final game at Cincinnati.

Giants Win 7th in Row, 8-6, Over Bucs

Victory Puts N. Y. 2 Games Out of 1st; Lohrman Takes 6th

By the Associated Press

New York, June 14.—The New York Giants ran their winning streak to seven straight today and stayed in the thick of the National League pennant race by turning back the Pittsburgh Pirates, 8 to 6. The victory left the Giants only one game back of the second-place Reds, who lost to the Dodgers.

Bob Klinger, who had beaten the Giants twice this year, was charged with his sixth defeat as Bill Terry's men came charging from behind with three runs in the seventh after the Bucs had countered four times in the upper half of the frame and driven Cliff Melton from the mound. Relief Pitcher Bill Lohrman was credited with the victory, his sixth against one defeat.

Joe Moore extended his batting streak through 15 games with a single in the seventh, that drove in the tying run. Bob Seeds sent three across the plate after relieving Frank Demaree. Demaree injured his shoulder in a tumble at first base.

Vince DiMaggio led the Bucs' eight-hit attack with two homers, both with the bases empty.

Tuckerman Tops D. C. Men In Senior Golf

By the Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., June 14.—Walter Tuckerman, 58, of the Burning Tree Club carded a 79 in the second section National Senior Tournament on the Apawamis Club links today and finished with a total of 156 for 36 holes. The mark equaled that attained by Findlay S. Douglas and Archie Brown for the first section, but by the time Tuckerman sank his last putt, he was already out of the running, for John K. Wadley had posted a 153 total a few minutes before.

Howard S. Block, 56, of Wheeling, W. Va., was Tuckerman's closest neighborhood rival with 170. Bloch was around in 86 today, two over his card of yesterday. Percival S. Ridsdale, of the Chevy Chase Club, who started with a 91 yesterday was down to 83 today and assumed third place in the local scene with a 174 tally.

Edward Clifford, 66, another Chevy Chase entry, zoomed from yesterday's 85 to a disappointing 98 today and went down to fourth place. William M. Thomas, 62, of the Baltimore Golf Club, had a final total of 187, 91 today, after a 96 yesterday. Dr. Gory Hogg, of Lewisburg brought up the rear with 192. He had 96 both days.

Tuckerman was also the leader at net with 144. Ridsdale, Thomas and Bloch had 148s, while Clifford had 152 and Hogg 172.

Elite Ten Upset By Lansburgh's, 3-2

One of the most stunning upsets of the Taft-Burroughs Softball League was turned in by Lansburgh's yesterday when it took a 3-2 decision over the leading Elite Laundry ten.

The winners were outhit, 7-4, but Pitcher Davies kept Elite blows well scattered. A spectacular catch by Lansburgh's Cottrell in the seventh ended an Elite rally, though the speedy centerfielder was slightly injured on the play.

Vitt Jokes About Players' Demands

what it's all about," said Bradley, adding he had no idea how long it would take to complete the investigation.

"Ten years," offered the smiling Vitt.

Others known to have joined the protest included Hal Trosky, slugging first baseman; Third-sacker Ken Keltner, Outfielder Jeff Heath, Utility Infielder Oscar Grimes, and even Catcher Rollie Hemsley, one of Vitts favorites.

Talkative Oscar's immediate predecessor, Steve O'Neill, was discarded in October, 1937, because he was too easy on the players. Bradley tried to sign Bill McKechnie. But McKechnie, probably fully cognizant of the tradition that Cleveland managers don't keep their jobs very long, went to Cincinnati and drove the Reds to a National League pennant.

Mrs. Reed Wins Tschiffely Cup With 150; Ann Reh 2d With 153

Winner Adds 92 to First Score; Mrs. Whipple Third With 156; Mrs. Hotze Low Gross Victor

Mrs. O. M. Reed yesterday cut ten strokes from her first day's score with a 92 and won the Tschiffely Cup tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club with a net 150 for the 36-hole play.

Mrs. Reed was 102 on Thursday and deducted a 22 handicap for a net 80. She added 92—22—70 for a two-round net total of 150, three shots better than Ann Reh, who was 96, 93—36—153. Mrs. Shelburn Whipple won third low net with 98, 96—38—156.

Mrs. R. E. Hotze surprised by winning low gross over the large field, beating present and former club champions, Sallie Whipple, Mrs. Wilda Martin and others with 94 and 87. Mrs. Hotze's 87 was her lowest in several years of tournament activity at Washington. The first day's net leader, Mrs. R. L. Hutchison, slipped and was just out of the prize list.

Two tied in Class B, Mrs. R. V. Young, 106, 104—46—164, and Mrs. Lloyd Dennis, 109, 111—56—164, with Mrs. W. C. Murphy third, 110, 117—56—171.

Mrs. Olive Quayle was the Class C leader, 116, 118—72—162, followed by Mrs. H. M. Rudio, 112, 119—33—165, and Mrs. J. R. Hogan, 128, 111—72—167.

KENWOOD

Mrs. E. C. Lupton made sure there would be no duplication of the first day's tie in the Rule Trophy play at Kenwood yesterday as she won the four-way playoff by 5 strokes, with 87-16, 71.

Mrs. S. T. DeLaMater was second, 93-17, 76, followed by Mrs. M. A. Miller, 100-20, 80, and Mrs. Woodlief Thomas, 97-13, 84.

WOODMONT

Mrs. Arthur Stephens and Mrs. H. Gil Hahn advanced to the finals of the Woodmont Club Handicap championship yesterday. Mrs. Stephens defeating Mrs. M. Jaffe, 2 up, and Mrs. Hahn scoring 2 and 1 over Mrs. Theodore Peyser.

In the consolations, Ruth Simon defeated Mrs. Irving Goldenberg, 5 and 4, and Mrs. H. Sauber won 2 and 1 over Mrs. H. Baum.

CONGRESSIONAL

A net 74 by Mrs. G. W. Rule won the R. P. Smith Trophy, the winner scoring 92—18, 74, to top a field of Congressional Club members. Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer was second with 85—10, 75.

Mrs. Myron Davy, who looks like a good bet in the Women's District Championship next week, won low gross with an 82. Other net prizes went to Mrs. F. G. Awalt, 89—121, 77, and Mrs. V. A. Welte, 93—16, 77.

A three-way tie for low putts included Mrs. John Lever, Mrs. R. C. Mitchell and Mrs. C. S. Teal. Mrs. Paul Williams and Mrs. F. E. Berquist were in charge of the event.

COLUMBIA

Mrs. J. P. Harper won the Ladies Day Flag Tournament at Columbia, with Mrs. A. Kessler, second. Mrs. W. E. Hall won the low putts prize, with only 29 for the 18-hole round.

Hunt Again Paces College Net Trials

Ritzenberg, Royal Lose in Doubles to Naval Academy Pair

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., June 14.—Joe Hunt, Naval Academy tennis ace and former Davis Cup player, continued to hold the spotlight today in the National Collegiate Third District eliminations that have been in progress here since Wednesday to select finalists for the tourney to be held at Haverford, Pa., during the week of June 24.

Although he qualified in singles yesterday, Hunt was pitted against Landon Buchanan, Virginia star, today, and won with ease, 6—1, 6—0, 6—0. Another singles match in the semifinal roundup was between Joe Davis, of Vanderbilt, Southeastern Conference champion for the last two years, and Allie Ritzenberg, University of Maryland. Davis also won going away, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0. The conditions of today's matches were three sets out of five in order to determine next year's seeding of contenders. Later Hunt and his teammate, Jack Williams, scored in the doubles over Ritzenberg and Doyle Royal, of Maryland, 3—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Because of a rainstorm yesterday afternoon that delayed the program, finals of the tourney have been extended until tomorrow, although only two matches are carded. One will be in singles and promises to be a thriller. The contestants will be Hunt and Davis. The other will be in doubles, Hunt and Williams, Navy, meeting Charlie Rider and Zan Carver, University of North Carolina.

Today's result had no effect on the status of the singles finalists, who were decided yesterday. They are Hunt, Davis, Buchanan and Ritzenberg, and the contenders in tomorrow's doubles will be the entries in the Haverford tournament.

Tartans May Drop Holy Cross From '41 Grid Schedule

Pittsburgh, June 14 (AP).—Carnegie Tech will drop Holy Cross, and possibly Duquesne from its 1941 grid schedule, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph predicted today, saying the change marked Tech's "descent from the pinnacle of major football supremacy."

Tech, which took Eastern honors and a share of the national football honors in 1938, will include only two major foes, the University of Pittsburgh and Notre Dame, on its 1941 schedule, the paper stated.

Buddy Overend, Tech's athletic director, refused to comment on the status of either the Notre Dame or Duquesne contracts, which expire next year.

Shea Bows to Greiner In Mid-Atlantic Golf

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., June 14.—Otto Greiner had a great day as match play began today in the Middle Atlantic Golf Championship tournament at Hillendale. Otto led a field of four Baltimoreans into the semifinal round, which will be played tomorrow morning, and broke the competitive course record established by Spencer Overton in the medal round by shooting a 67 in the afternoon. Overton's figure was a 68.

Otto capped the climax of his brilliant round with a holed pitch shot for an eagle two as the gallery gathered on the fringe of the fifteenth green whooped approval. It was a glorious finish for Otto, but a cruel stab for Billy Shea, of Congressional, winner of the tournament in 1937. Billy had fought magnificently in a losing battle after going three down to Otto on the ninth.

He was still the same number of holes down on the fifteenth, but a beautiful approach shot to within 3 feet of the pin assured him a birdie and kept alive hope of a rally to square the match.

But Otto lay 60 yards away on his drive, and he took careful aim with his sand wedge. Up came the ball, down to the green and straight in a bee-line run to the cup. It settled in for an eagle and ended the match, 3 and 4. Three under par as a result, Otto finished out the round, after Shea sunk the birdie putt proving the eagle had been necessary.

Greiner three-putted the sixteenth, but won back a stroke with a deuce on the seventeenth and finished in par for his 67.

The afternoon round showed Otto seven under par for the day. He had played only 14 holes in the morning round with George F. Miller, of Columbia, and was four under par for that distance.

Shea also had a brilliant round, five under par, for his morning contribution, but a few short approaches and a putt or two that failed to drop cost him his chance.

FIRST ROUND

Spencer S. Overton (Rolling Road) defeated Eddie Johnston (Terra Maria), 2 up.

John Quinn (Hillendale) defeated Johnny Farrell (Hillendale), 3 and 1.

Billy Deiweiler (Conaressional) defeated Herbert A. Wagner, jr. (Baltimore C. C.), 3 and 2.

Billy Shea (Congressional) defeated Earl Skinker (Congressional), 7 and 6.

SECOND ROUND

Overton defeated Quinn, 1 up.
Steinbert defeated Deiweiler, 2 and 1.
Jones defeated Semmler, 1 up.
Grisner defeated Shea, 4 and 3.

Revolta, Picard Ahead

By the Associated Press

Toledo, Ohio, June 14.—Defending Champion Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta ripped 15 strokes off par today in the second and third rounds to assume a commanding lead as the half-way mark approached in the sixth annual $6,400 Inverness four-ball golf matches.

By going 10 strokes under par with a brilliant 61 on the morning round, the two stars soared to a "plus 11" rating, but they fell to a "plus 10" in the third round as they dropped a one-hole decision despite a neat best ball of 68.

The 61, which tied the Inverness best ball record set by Sam Snead and Vic Ghezzi, gave the champs a 7-up victory over the veteran Walter Hagen and Byron Nelson, home pro and 1939 National Open king.

In the afternoon Picard and Revolta finished 1 down to Gene Sarazen and Clayton Heafner, Sarazen canning a long putt on the final hole to win.

The All-Star field of 16 turned in 88 birdies in today's pair of jaunts around the tough Inverness course, scene of the 1920 and 1931 National Opens. That brought the three-round birdie total to 128.

Back of the leaders, with a "plus 5" rating were Jug McSpaden and Lawson Little, the new National Open king. They handed Horton Smith and Jimmy Thomson a 7-up beating this morning, and then nosed out Sam Snead and Ralph Guldahl by a single hole this afternoon to jump from seventh to second place.

The two leaders tangle Saturday morning.

'Peg' Removed, Grains Mount In Brisk Deals

Wheat Ends 1 to 1 7/8 Cents Higher; Corn Also Buoyant

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 14.—Active and normal trading conditions returned to the grain market today in the first session without the minimum price levels which had been in effect since May 20 and wheat and corn values advanced as much as 2½ and 3⅜ cents respectively.

Strength in securities and prospects of additional Government flour buying over the week-end accounted for much of the strength although pit brokers said the market's behavior, despite serious character of news from Europe and removal of the minimums, did much to restore confidence. Buying came largely through houses with milling and eastern connections, they said.

Satisfactory Action

John G. McCarthy, board of trade president, said the action of the market was "very satisfactory" as far as exchange officials were concerned.

Wheat closed 1@1⅞ cents higher than yesterday, July, 79½; September, 80@80⅛. Corn unchanged to 2⅜ higher, July, 61¾; September, 60⅛@60¾. Oats, ⅜-1⅛ lower. Soy beans 5 to 8 cents lower and rye ¾-1½ lower. Lard finished 25 to 32 cents higher.

Wheat dipped as much as 1¾ cents in opening trades, due partly to execution of orders that could not be filled yesterday when prices of all grains fell to the minimums and trade came virtually to a standstill. After this initial flurry, however, the market quickly righted itself and values pushed upward to small net gains within the first five minutes.

Outside Marts Lower

Minneapolis wheat declined as much as 5⅜ cents but closed only 1 to 2 cents net lower. Kansas City prices were ½ to 1½ higher. At Winnipeg, where minimums still are in effect, prices fell about 1½ cents. That market was closed yesterday during the slump here.

Chicago rye fell as much as 4½ cents while oats were off 2 cents at one stage. Weakness of these markets as well as the sharp break in soy beans, with July beans off the 8 cents daily limit, was attributed partly to adjustment of prices due to the fact that trading has been difficult in recent sessions because quotations were at the minimums.

Foreign Buying Boosts Cotton

New York, June 14 (AP).—An influx of foreign buying orders canceled early losses in cotton futures today and swept prices to gains of 16 to 19 points.

Orders, said to be for French account, abruptly hit the ring and the list swung ahead. The buying was believed to represent covering of hedges on cotton that might have been destroyed in war areas.

Whisky to Rise 35 to 40 Cents A Quart Here

Federal Tax Boost To Mean Retail Price Hike on July 1

An advance of 35 to 40 cents a quart in retail whisky prices is anticipated in Washington when the Federal tax on liquor is raised from $2.25 to $3 a gallon. The pending tax bill would place the new rate in effect on July 1.

This was the opinion expressed yesterday by representative liquor dealers here. The increase will approximate 20 to 25 cents a pint, it was said. As yet no substantial "stocking up" by consumers has been noted, but dealers expect more than the usual sales increase on and after the next Government payday.

Since the proposed new tax is applicable to floor stocks in excess of a limited amount, the wholesale and retail dealers will have little chance to "beat" the increase.

Large distillers are expected to advance wholesale prices by 50 to 75 cents a case to compensate for higher costs arising as a result of the tax. Since the tax also is applicable to floor stocks (inventory) in excess of 100 cases it will mean a heavy burden for distilleries which have large stocks.

The problem of higher Federal taxes, which must be paid when the liquor is bottled and leaves the distillery, is a serious one to the large distilleries. The leading companies in the industry, for example, sell on the average 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 cases a year. On the old $2.25 tax this meant an annual tax outlay of about $8.74 a case. On the new $3 tax it means $9 a case, an increase of $2.25 a case, or roughly $9,000,000 to $11,250,000 a year.

Distillers consider the increased Federal tax may curtail volume of sales to some extent. It is pointed out that the recent advance in Canadian taxes as a result of the war cut consumption around 20 per cent, but the Canadian increase was considerably larger than ours. Distilleries feel, however, that the national defense program, which is the cause of the tax, will greatly increase employment and raise wages so that this larger public buying power will eventually compensate for the higher taxes to a considerable extent.

War Issues Lead Upturn of 1 to 5 Points; Steel and Motor Shares in Van of Surge; Government Bonds Rise Moderately

—STABLER—MARKET— .... LEAD— ... ...

New York, June 14.—Wall street shook off the depressing effects of war news today and gave closer attention to domestic affairs, including the cycle of extraordinary activity just opening for industry by reason of Anglo-French munitions purchases here and the national defense program needs.

With the steels, metals and other war stocks in the van, the market forged ahead after a brief period of orientation at the opening. At the close gains in individual issues ran from 1 to 5 points, most stocks regaining all the ground lost on Thursday. The composite average price of the 100 leading shares was .74 point up on the day with transfers 948,310.

Franc Trade Halts

In foreign exchange dealings the French franc virtually disappeared as a medium. This, of course, reflected confusion and lack of immediate facilities because of the Nazi entry into Paris and migration of banking institutions from the French capital to the countryside. Well-informed quarters in New York were of the opinion that trading in francs will be resumed in a normal way with little delay.

Allied reverses, which have been continuing without an important break for quite some time, have been invariably depressing to the share list up to today. While it was possible that the occupancy of Paris had been discounted previously, the actual event coupled with apparent German success in an initial maneuver to turn the left flank of the Maginot Line, could have produced the same type of nervous selling which depressed stocks so severely earlier in the month.

Steels outran all other divisions in the upturn, six leaders showing an average gain of more than 2 points, including net advances of 3¼ for Steel common, 4¾ for Bethlehem and ⅞ for Republic, all in active dealings.

Motor Shares Strong

The motor section also was strong with low as well as high-priced shares in demand. Chrysler spurted more than 2 points and General Motors added a point. A selection of aircrafts, chemicals, coppers, equipments and papers were prominent. The rise in retail trade reported by Dun & Bradstreet aided mercantile shares which had gains of large fractions to more than a point. Loft came back into the spotlight after a period of only moderate activity and led the list on turnover of 42,300 shares at an advance of 3½ points.

Gains of 1 to 2 points were recorded by such issues as Westinghouse, Pennsylvania Railroad, Kennecott, Anaconda, Johns-Manville, International Paper, International Harvester, General Electric, Chesapeake & Ohio and American Smelting.

The theory of manufactures of railroad equipment that the railroads begin to display interest in purchasing supplies when weekly carloadings reach the 700,000-car level is of interest because of the figure for the week-ended June 9—702,571 cars, a new high for the year. The fact that this figure has been reached so early in the season suggests higher levels before the seasonal traffic peak arrives in September-October.

Oils Are Backward

Oils were backward again today. The American Petroleum Institute reports that the average price of gasoline in leading cities of the country during May was the lowest since November 1, 1934. Profits of most petroleum concerns, however, are understood to be holding up well compared with the first quarter, a period in which they were substantial.

Listed bonds moved upward today, under the leadership of United States Government securities. Treasury bonds showed gains in the formal trading from small fractions to more than a point, and some modest liquidation late in the day modified the advance only slightly in counter dealings.

Most foreign bonds advanced, notwithstanding the fall of Paris. Speculative domestic issues were in quiet demand and moved forward along with equities. Trading totaled $5,070,000.

Dealers were not quite certain whether the Federal Reserve was selling Treasury bonds from its portfolio, but most believed that there was no marketing from that quarter. Small buying orders sufficed to send levels higher, since institutions saw no reason for selling. Gains were recorded in most utility, railroad and industrial bonds of best gradings.

French Bonds Held

French 7s held at par, despite the fall of the capital. German bonds moved 1 to 2 points higher, because of the military situation, and Italians rallied even more sharply. Australian and Canadian bonds were generally in demand, despite the reverses suffered by the Allies. Norwegian, Danish and Belgian bonds reflected the belief in some quarters that peace may develop soon. Argentines were favored issues in the Latin-American group.

Speculative railroad bonds were in small but persistent demand, and poor supply. Gains of a point or two were common, in this group. Local tractions moved briskly upward, as did share privilege and other special groups.

O'Donnell-Reliance in 8-8 Tie

Darkness Halts Game In 6th Inning

Insurance Nine Score Six Runs In Big Frame To Gain Deadlock

For five innings Freddy Wahler, O'Donnell second baseman seeing his first start on the mound, held Reliance Life to five hits and two runs yesterday, but the insurance nine blossomed in a 6-run rally in the sixth to earn an 8-8 draw, in a Washington Post Industrial League game.

The first four Reliance players at bat in the sixth hit cleanly to start the big spree. With one out and two runs in, Wahler walked two men and hit De Angelis with a pitched ball, to score another pair. That was all for Wahler, but Relief Pitcher Birch immediately tossed a single to Reliance's England, to knot the count. Hostilities were then called off because of darkness.

Masterson didn't permit the ball game to get completely out of hand until the fourth when the Tigers improved their lead to 4-1. In that inning he hit Dick Bartell and watched Bartell scramble all the way to third when Ferrell threw past Bonura in an attempt to pick the runner off. The next thing that happened was a muff by Cecil Travis on McCosky's grounder, although nobody scored. Two guys scored, though, when Charley Gehringer doubled down the rightfield line.

In the third, Masterson gave up four hits and three runs to boost the Tigers' lead to 7-1. Newhouser popped a bunt over the picher's box for a freak single, and it was the first of four Tiger hits. Bartell doubled to left, McCoskey caught Lewis flat-footed with a bunt, Gehringer singled to right, and Greenberg moved the third run of the inning home on a line drive to Walker.

Krakauskas got the pitching job in the sixth and one of his first acts was to walk Higgins. Another was to pitch a double to Tebbetts that scored Higgins. Then Krakky took a long windup and Tebbetts stole third. Then Bartell doubled to right, and the second run of the inning scored. Then McCoskey singled to center and the third run of the inning scored. That made it 10-1, which is where you came in, in the first paragraph.

Second-Inning Rally Wins for Pepco Nine, 9-4

Six runs in the second inning were the main factor in Pepco's 9-4 victory over Union Printers yesterday as the winners closed out their first-half action in the U. S. Government League with seven wins and three losses.

The Powermen thus retained a chance for the first-half crown, their hopes being hinged on the leading Gas Light's remaining games.

Four of Pepco's ten singles were crowded into the six-run second inning, along with a trio of misplays by Printers. Morgan gave the Printers ten safeties, but none was for extra bases and all were scattered.

Hassett Paces Bees to Victory Over Cubs, 4-2

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 14.—Refreshed by three days' rest and bolstered by the effective pitching of Dick Errickson, the Bees turned on the Chicago Cubs today and gained their first win in eight starts against Gabby Hartnett's forces by a 4-2 margin.

Errickson yielded just four hits, but only two of them figured in the Chicago scoring. Paced by Buddy Hassett, who got four for five, including a two-bagger, the Bees clouted Vern Olsen for eight of their ten blows before the southpaw was relieved by Charley Root after the seventh inning.

John Burke, G.U., Gains Semifinals In New York Golf

By the Associated Press

Purchase, N. Y., June 14.—Two former holders of the Metropolitan Amateur Championship, Willie Turnesa, victor in 1937, and T. Suffern (Tommy) Tailer, winner in 1932 and 1934, were successful in gaining the semifinal round of the Century Club tournament today.

The other two quarter-final survivors were John P. Burke, captain of the Georgetown University team and former intercollegiate titleholder, and Tommy Strafaci, younger brother of Frankie, who was defending champion until yesterday.

Arcade-Pontiac Play Columbias Tomorrow

Arcade-Pontiac Baseball Club will seek its seventh straight victory tomorrow when they meet Columbia A. C. on Fairlawn No. 2 diamond at 3 o'clock. Billy Wheatley and Norman Treadway will form the Arcade battery, while Nick Watson and Bernie Batili will work for Columbia.

Bucs Send Berres, Cash to Bees for Catcher Al Lopez

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 14.—The Pittsburgh Pirates tonight announced they have acquired Al Lopez, star catcher of the Boston Bees, in exchange for Catcher Ray Berries and an unannounced amount of cash which was described as "substantial."

The trade was completed in New York today at a conference between Bob Quinn, of the Bees, and William Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh club.

"We've wanted Lopez for years," a spokesman for the club said in disclosing the deal.

Berres will report at midnight, and Lopez will join the Pirates tomorrow.

Pittsburgh fans thought the deal would make a first division team out of the Bucs, who have been floundering about the cellar since the season started.

The club would not divulge the cash involved, but it was thought the sum exceeded the $35,000 given along with Al Todd and Johnny Dickshot for Ray Mueller, who now is starring in the minors.

Klein Nine Meets Miller In City League

Its last start in the first half of Capital City A League will be undertaken by Klein Tavern tomorrow when it meets Miller Furniture in the feature of a 12-game schedule.

At present leading the division with five victories against a single setback, the Tavernmen must win to stay in the race. A Miller victory would put the Furniture club in a tie with J. C. Flood Plumbers for the lead, each with four triumphs and one loss.

Leaders in B section have an easy day ahead, Plaza Tile meeting the cellar Hahn nine and Washington Home Improvement drawing a bye. The two first-mentioned have won five and dropped one game to date. St. Francis Xavier, in third place could join the leaders with a victory over Terminal Ice.

By Arch McDonald
Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

To Zeke Bonura four points because his double drove in a run and put the Nats in the ballgame in the fourth inning.

To Johnny Welaj, two points, because he made one of the Nats five hits and walked on three other trips to the plate.

Panama Canal Nine Loses to Interior, 8-6

Interior Department won its third game in the Departmental League season yesterday, 8-3, over a Panama Canal nine for which three pitchers labored in vain. The winners rapped out 10 safeties, including a double by Vic Gauzza, jr., and triples by Wright and Jewett.

For four innings Panama held the upper hand, registering a single run in the second and two more in the third. In the fourth, however, Interior started rolling. It scored once then, four times in the fifth and three times in the sixth. Meanwhile Pitchers Cleary and Love were issuing only four hits and fanning 8.

Network Notes—Professor Quiz starts making a commercial movie for Audio Productions next week in which the tables are turned on him. At the end of the film, six amateur quizzers bomoard the C.B.S. quizmaster with questions . . . Success story: A little over a year ago Bea Wain, Columbia "Hit Parade" singing star, was a vocalist with Larry Clinton's orchestra when he played New York's Paramount Theater. This week she returned as a featured star. . . .

Frances Chaney, beautiful C. B. S. actress heard on the "Aunt Jenny" sketches, has been blocking traffic of late in the C. B. S. lobby in New York. She's selling tickets to a cocktail party to be held June 18 at New York's Hotel Pierre for the American Red Cross. The party is being sponsored by the American Federation of Radio Actors . . . Helen Troy, comedienne on C. B. S.'s "It Happened in Hollywood," has been signed for a prominent role in an untitled picture starring Joe E. Brown . . . Radio's loss is Mexico's gain.

Bill Fifield, C. B. S. Chicago announcer, received tentative acceptance of a long story he wrote about Mexico with a request from the publisher that it be made into a full-length novel—so Bill is being "forced" into taking a "vacation" in Mexico while he concentrates on his writing . . . When Maj. Bowes saluted Chicopee, Mass., last week there were evidently no fires raging in that town. The 200th telephone call from the Honor City was Chicopee Fire Station No. 1 . . .

That girl in all the new Chesterfield ads is Glenn Miller's vocalist, Marion Hutton. She's their "Girl o' the Month" . . . Peg Wall, who plays "Lois Colton" in Columbia's "Romance of Helen Trent," returned from a Florida vacation with a flock of bright new summer clothes, but she also brought back something she didn't want—a large bump on the head received while taking diving lessons.

These Women!

By d'Alessio

"All right, Miss Judson, suppose we put it this way: 'Do you promise to learn to love, make an attempt to honor, and perhaps—just perhaps even obey, in time?'"

Orphans in Love

Marion White

Chapter 40

IT WAS a different Millicent which spoke. Her eyes had lost some of their proud fire; in its place a new tenderness welled up in a soft mist which toned down the hard, glassy stare.

For the first time in her life she was face to face with a situation beyond her own poor, overestimated power.

The self-inflated props of her egotism were washed from under her in an overpowering, incomprehensible flood, and she was stripped to the bare essentials of her character.

The confident, self-possessed girl had vanished, for who can be confident and self-possessed in the face of death? Who can snap his fingers and dare the Fates? It was a woman, a woman who knew the futility of her own will and the absurdity of her family's checkbook, who answered these questions.

The sparkling, arrogant girl who had placed her demands upon the altar of life and seen each one gratified was no longer.

Voice Softens

"I'll stay with him, mother," she said again. Even her voice had softened. "Go out on the terrace for a while and get a breath of fresh air."

"No. Not now, dear. He might awaken any minute."

"You've said that for five days, mother. I'll call you if he does. I'll call you the very instant—Oh, my dear, don't you see that I can't let you be sick, too?"

There was a childish desperation in the plea, the cry of a little girl afraid to be left alone.

Her mother recognized it instinctively. She sighed, torn between the two needs, and her breath carried the faint echo of the anguish within her. "Later, Millicent," she agreed with a great reluctance. "As soon as the nurse returns. Wait for me outside, dear. Leave us alone now . . ."

Leaves Room

So Millicent left the room, understanding, as she had never dreamed possible, the other woman's feelings.

Her mother was possessed with the only spiritual power on earth which could give her strength to sit in the still, chilling presence of death, hour after hour, without succumbing to hysteria.

It was the hope and the faith of love. As long as her father breathed, so her mother would remain at his side, waiting on the knowledge that her own spirit, so closely linked with his, could call him back.

She understood, because now she understood love. She, Millicent Abbott, the cool, contemptuous sophisticate, knew at last the glory and the humility of human devotion. She was in love.

It had nothing at all to do with her engagement, for that was a silly, superficial drama in which she wanted to play the role of heroine for an approving, admiring assembly . . . to be seen and applauded, in the proper clothes and at the proper places, to provide a delightful interlude of importance, and to bolster her self-esteem with the consolation of envy.

Irritated Her

Peter had irritated her and small wonder, for he was only the puppet player in her supporting cast, and as long as she moved in this artificial role, he would jar the dramatic episode whenever he missed a cue or spoke his words differently than her expectations had written.

She did not love Peter. There never should have been doubt, if she had listened to her heart.

It had always been Kenneth, ever since that first night long ago. When he had gone away, he had taken something of her with him, some fragment of her soul, and without it she had been stripped of all the warm attributes of contentment and understanding and tolerance.

She had been vicious and selfish and irrational. She had filled her heart with hatred and spite, believing that such qualities might conquer the love which he had carried away.

As yet, she had said nothing of this to Peter, although she never doubted her intention to tell him the truth.

Hurt him she might, but such hurt would be trivial compared to the greater hurt of letting him grow to know her as the thwarted selfish fool she had become.

Said Nothing

She had said nothing because there had been no occasion. Peter himself, as if some tacit agreement had been reached between them, was reserved these past few days.

He spoke no word of sentiment, neither did he demand by the slightest look or gesture any affection from her. She attributed this to the shock of her father's sudden illness. Peter's grief was sincere and deep.

Nor had Kenneth made any new advance. The fact of death hanging over a household forces all problems of life into the background.

He called for her each day and his voice offered hope and assurance; he sent flowers to bear the message that he could not speak. But he made no effort to intrude himself into her grief.

An Oracle

Thus she promised herself that everything would adjust itself, everything that was important to her happiness, as soon as her father would be well again.

Not for one instant did she permit the thought that he might not recover. She could not visualize a life without him. From hte earliest days of her childhood, he had been the rock of her assurance, the very cornerstone of her existence.

He was the oracle to whom she could bring each problem, serious or trivial; he was the god who had created the world of beauty and luxury and tranquillity in which she lived. Without him, she could not survive . . .

Her father would be well, very soon now. They would take him away, her mother and she, to some spot where he could lie for hours in the warm sunshine and gather new strength and purpose.

Then, when he was his old self once again, she would explain her mistake in becoming engaged to Peter. Her father would understand: he understood her moods better than she did herself.

He would point out the wisest and kindest course to pursue in working herself out of the maze of uncertainty into which she had stumbled so blindly.

In the other room, at the same moment, her mother breathed the same prayer. "You will be well, John. Can't you hear me, my dear? Can't you try to speak to me?"

So she whispered to him, bending over him and straining every nerve in the tremendous urge to catch the one vital spark which might recall him.

Minutes Pass

Each new moment was discouragingly like each past moment of these dragging, endless days. There was no hope, and there was no despair.

And then, quite suddenly, a strange, exciting current stirred the atmosphere. The silence was not broken, neither by sound nor by motion. Everything was as it had been for hours on end.

The counterpane was smooth and white, marked only by the small, motionless mound of the sick man's body. His thin, pallid hand lay lifeless at the edge of the bed, where his wife had dropped it a moment before. His face was gray and immobile, his eyes sunken deep into their sockets.

Everything was the same. Everything that could be noted and visualized in concrete reality.
